FIRE = FIRE = FIRE

PROTECT YOUR PROPERTY WITH THE CAMERON
Steel Ladders and Fire Escapes.

It is practical. It is made of Bessemer Steel. It is permanent. It is inexpensive. It is always ready for use. It is indestructible. It costs less than any fire escape and is without a competitor. Ice and snow will not adhere to it. No rot as in the case of wooden ladders. It should be on all

Churches, Schools, Hotels, Private Houses, Barns and Out Buildings.

This flexible steel ladder is made in two sizes of selected Bessemer Steel. For dwellings, barns, and outbuildings, and 7 1/2 for fire escapes.

When adjusted to the wall they are as firm as the wall itself. They have been recommended amongst many others by the following :-

D. R. NOOMAN, - Chief of Fire Department, Perth, Ont.
J. P. QUIGLEY, - " " Syracuse, N. Y.
E. J. JEWELL, - " " Auburn, N. Y.
C. M. HOGG, - " " Binghampton, N. Y.
J. H. ESPEY, - " " Elmira.
G. F. McDONALD - Sec'y Fire and Light Committee, Ottawa, Ont.

and hundreds of others. Completely successful wherever introduced.

Sole Agent for Napanee, Deseronto and District.

NAPANEE 4. KINGSTON 3.

A Large Crowd of Enthusiasts Witness the Best Game ever played at Napanee.

The members of the local base ball team and all their enthusiastic supporters are wearing the smile that won't come off, and quite rightly too, for their win on Wednesday was a most creditable feat indeed, as the Oriental base ball club, of Kingston, is without doubt the best all-round amateur aggregation in this section of the country, and when any other team puts it all over them they are going some, but the locals did the trick in one of the best games ever played in Napanee. The game was called about two o'clock, Kingston going to bat. There was nothing doing until the second innings when the "Three Linkers" succeeded in chasing in two runs. There was no more scoring until the sixth innings when Rose crossed the pan making the score 2-1 in favor of Kingston. It was in Napanee's half of the eighth that there was something doing. A nice juicy error by one of the Kingston bunch started the fun and before the atmosphere cleared Dunn, Allison and Shultz had made a circuit of the bases and the score stood 4-2 in favor of Napanee. In the ninth Kingston only managed to get one and they were a whalloped lot to the tune of 4-3. Following is a synopsis of the game by innings :

Kingston - Laird reached first on a clean single between first and second, Appleton fanned, Saunders bunted to Shortts and was out at first, McCammon fanned.

Napanee - Warner flied out to third and was caught out, McNeill bunted and reached first, Rose also bunted and was safe at first, McNeill out while trying to steal third, Shortts fanned.

Kingston - Dickson hit the ball on the nose for a nice three-bagger. Birch bunted and got first, Dickson coming home, Derry fanned, Burke out on foul tip, Smith singled and got first, Birch came home, Laird singled and Appleton who followed was out at first.

Napanee - Dunn fanned, Allison connected and was safe on the initial sack, Shultz singled and Allison was out at second, Derry bunted and was thrown out at first.

Kingston - Saunders fanned, McCammon hit to left field and was caught out by Allison, Dickson reached first on a bunt, Birch fanned.

Napanee - Wood hit to first baseman and was out, Warner did likewise, and McNeill fouled and was caught out by third baseman.

Kingston - Derry out at first, Burke out at first, Smith singled and on a wild throw by Dunn was advanced to second, Laird hit out to Derry and was out.

Napanee - Rose singled, and was safe at first owing to the ball being muffed by the baseman, Shortts hit to third and was out, Dunn out at first on infield hit, Allison chased the ball out over third and was safe at first, Shultz out at first.

was out.
Napanee—Rose singled, and was safe at first owing to the ball being muffed by the baseman, Shortts hit to third and was out, Dunn out at first on infield hit, Allison chased the ball out over third and was safe at first, Shultz out at first.
Kingston—Appleton fanned, Saunders fanned, McCammon and Dickson both got first on hits, but Birch fanned.
Napanee Derry hit and got first, Wood hit to centre field and was out, Warner singled and Derry was thrown out at third, McNeill fanned.
Kingston—Derry, Burke and Smith all hit to infield and were out at first.
Napanee—Rose connected for a beautiful two-bagger, Shortts hit to centre field and was out, Dunn hit over third and was out, Allison hit out a warm one to short which was fumbled and Rose scored the first tally, Shultz safe at first, Derry fanned.
Kingston—Laird hit to left field and was out by a sensational catch by Allison, Appleton out at first by Shultz, Saunders hit out to left field and caught by Allison.
Napanee—Wood singled and Warner fanned, McNeill out on foul tip to catcher, and Rose caught out by third baseman.
Kingston—McCammon hit by pitcher, Dickson singled, Birch fanned, Derry hit to infield and Dickson was out at second, Burke out at first.
Napanee—In this innings the locals didn't do a thing to the Kingston pitcher. Six of the Napanee players picked up the willow and swatted the ball on the nose good and hard with the result that three runs was added to their lonesome one. Shortts was the first man up and hit to centre field and was out, Dunn cracked out a corking single, as also did Allison. Shultz biffed the ball and Dunn came home, Derry, not to be outdone, went out and knocked off a beauty which let Allison come in, Wood went to bat with a smile on his face which plainly said "ain't he easy" and banged out a single which allowed Shultz to cross the plate with the third run on his shoulder. The Kingston twirler then woke up and fanned Warner and McNeill.
Kingston—Smith reached second on a nice hit over third, Laird hit to left field and was caught out by Allison, Appleton fanned, Smith scored when the catcher allowed a ball to get by him, Saunders out on a foul tip caught by Rose.
Score by innings—
Napanee—0 0 0 0 1 0 3 x—4.
Kingston—0 2 0 0 0 0 0 1 3.
The line-up of the teams—
Napanee—Warner rf, McNeill 3b, Rose c, Shortts 1b, Dunn ss, Allison lf, Shultz 2b, J. Derry cf, Wood p.
Kingston—Laird ss, Appleton lf, Saunders 3b, McCammon p, Dickson 1b, Birch rf, B. Derry 2b, Burke c, Smith cf.
The crowd of people who watched the ball game was equal, if not in excess of those who watched the races.
Jack Allison played a star game in left field, he having four catches to his credit, besides four hits and one run, with only one error. That's going some.
Rose got the longest hit of the day, his bingle in the sixth almost reached the race track.
The way Wood fooled the Kingston ball tossers was a shame, ten of them walked up and fanned the wind. McCammon, the Kingston pitcher, struck out seven.
Everybody is going to the park on Wednesday afternoon next to see the game between Napanee and Belleville. Napanee owes the Belleville boys one for what they did to them in Belleville, and on Wednesday they will get what's coming to them with interest. Ladies are admitted free and a cordial invitation is extended to all of them.

YARKER.
 Thomas Bradford was thrown by his horse and had his head badly cut. He undertook to ride the horse home from the pasture without bridle or halter.

The Methodist church Sabbath school will picnic at the R. Galbraith grove, Varty Lake, on Wednesday, July 8th.

E. W. Benjamin has purchased a two-minute horse from Oshawa. He arrived home with him Monday last. George McDonald is home for a few days.

Yarker was very quiet on Dominion day, so many having gone away fishing, and some to Tamworth and Wapoose.

Roy McWilliams and James Lovelace, attending Albert College, Belleville, are home for their holidays.

J. C. Connolly is raising his storage building above high water mark.

Sydney McKim and wife, of Switzer, were at Mrs. H. Cambridge's. Peter Crouther has gone to Prince Edward, his health not being very good.

Miss Flo Asselstine, of Moscow, is at Hermine Connolly's.

The family of A. W. Benjamin have gone for two months to their cottage home, Hydenham Lake.

Crops are much improved as the result of the recent rains, and there will be plenty of all kinds of produce.

Rev. J. Batstone will be here on Thursday. A reception will be tendered him.

A. Baxter is somewhat improved. Miss Laura Asselstine, teacher in Yarker public school, has returned to Kingston. She proved a success as a teacher.

Miss May Gomor was married to William Carr, of Petworth. The wedding was at Napanee, by Rev. J. R. Real. Miss Grace Darling and Mr. German acted as bridesmaid and groomsmen. They left for the west on an extended trip.

E. Shangraw and Martha Franklin were married, at Queensboro, the home of the bride's parents. They will reside near Yarker.

Monica McDonald, youngest daughter of George McDonald, was united in marriage to Joseph McNulty, of Toronto, by Rev. Father McCarthy, of Centerville. They were assisted by Charles McNulty, of Norwood, and Miss Daisy McDonald, sister of the bride. The bride looked charming in white silk net over white silk, and orange blossoms. Many were the presents presented to her ere her departure for her home in Toronto.

The Methodist churches at all three appointments of Yarker circuit, Moscow, Colerbrooke and Yarker, last Sunday, were well attended, especially at Yarker, Sunday evening when Rev. Mr. Farnsworth preached his farewell sermon. Rev. E. Farnsworth's pastorate here has been successful, and the people parted from him and his family with feeling of regret. Mr. and Mrs. Farnsworth were the recipients of tokens of appreciation from church, Sunday school and choir.

A House of Mystery

OR, THE GIRL IN BLUE

"Carnival!" she snorted. "A disgraceful exhibition of a town's lawlessness. A miserable pageant got up merely to attract the unsuspecting foreigner into the web spread for him by extortionate hotel-keepers. All the so-called fun is performed by paid mountebanks; the cars are not only marvellous, but there is always something extremely offensive in their character, while the orgies which take place at the masked balls at the Casino are absolutely disgraceful. The whole thing is artificial, and deserves no support at all from winter visitors."

Mrs. Anson, for once, did not agree with this sweeping condemnation, while Mabel declared that she always enjoyed the fun of the battles of flowers and paper confetti, although she admitted that she never had the courage to go out on these days when the pellets of lime, or "hard confetti," are permitted. Both Hickman and myself supported Mabel in defence of the annual feasts at Nice as being unique in all the world.

But the irritating woman was not to be convinced that her opinions were either ill-formed or in the least distorted. She had never been present at a carnival ball, she admitted, but it had been described to her by two estimable ladies who had, and that was, for her, sufficient. They were a pair of pious souls, and would, of course, never exaggerate to the length of a lie.

Dinner over, the ladies retired, and Hickman and myself were left to smoke and gossip. He was certainly a very ugly man, and at times asserted an overbearing superiority in conversation; but having watched him very closely, I at length arrived at the conclusion that this was his natural manner, and was not intended to be offensive. Indeed, ever since that first moment when I had entered and been introduced, he had shown himself to be very pleasant and affable towards me.

"Poor Miss Wells!" he laughed, after the door had closed. "She's so infernally positive about everything. It would be as good as an entertainment to induce her to expound her views upon religious matters."

"Any argument seems utterly useless," I remarked as I lit a cigar.

"Do you know Nice well?" he inquired, after reflecting a moment.

"I've spent three winters there," I answered.

"And at Monte Carlo, I suppose?"

"Yes, of course," I responded, laughing. "I suppose scarcely any man goes to Nice without going over to Monte and risking a few louis."

"Were you lucky?"

"So, so. One season I won five thousand francs. In fact, I've never lost on the whole season. I've always left the Riviera with some of the bank's money."

"Then you can heartily congratulate yourself," he said. "I'm the reverse. I generally lose. Do you believe in any system at roulette?"

"No; they are all frauds," I answered promptly.

"Except one," he interposed. "There's one based on the law of averages, which must turn up in your favor if you're only patient enough. The reason why it is so difficult is because it's such a long and tedious affair."

"Explain it," I urged, for a new system that was infallible was, to me, of greatest interest. I had, in the days before my blindness, made a study of the not come up nine times again that day. Of course, this may occur almost at the opening of play, or not till the table is near closing, therefore it requires great patience and constant attendance. To-day it may not come up nine times, but it will probably come up nine times on two occasions to-morrow, and so the average always rights itself."

His theory was certainly a novel one, and impressed me. There might, I thought, be something in it. He had never had patience to try it, he admitted, but he had gone through a whole year's "permanences," and found that only on three or four occasions had it failed.

For half an hour or so he sat lucidly explaining the results of his studies of the game with the air of a practised gambler. In these I became at once interested—as every man is who believes he has found the secret of how to get the right side of the bank; but we were at length compelled to put down our cigars, and he led the way into the drawing-room, where the ladies awaited us.

The room was a large, handsome one, elegantly furnished, and lit by two great lamps, which shed a soft, subdued light from beneath their huge shades of silk and lace. Mabel was sitting at the open grand piano, the shaded candlelight causing the beautiful diamond star in the coils of her dark brown hair to flash with a dazzling iridescence, and as I entered she turned and gave me a sweet smile of welcome.

A second time I glanced around that spacious apartment, then next instant stood breathless—transfixed.

I could not believe my own eyes. It seemed absolutely incredible. Yet the truth was beyond all doubt.

In the disposition of the furniture, and in the general appointments of that handsome salon, the home of the woman I so dearly loved, I recognized the very room which I had once explored with my keen sense of touch—the room in which had been committed that ghastly, mysterious, midnight crime!

CHAPTER XV.

"How you men gossip!" Mabel exclaimed, turning upon the piano-stool, and laughing merrily.

"I wasn't aware that we had been very long," I answered, sinking into a low armchair near her. "If so, I'm sure I apologize. The fact is, that Mr. Hickman was explaining a new system of how to break the bank at Monte Carlo."

"Oh, Mr. Hickman!" she cried, turning at once to him. "Do explain it, and I'll try it when we go to the Riviera."

"Mabel, my dear," exclaimed her mother, scandalized, "you'll do nothing of the kind. You know I don't approve of gambling."

"Oh, I think it's awfully good fun," her daughter declared.

"If you win," I added.

"Of course," she added; then, turning again to Hickman, she induced him to explain his new and infallible system just as he had explained it to me.

The trend of the conversation was, however, lost to me. My ears closed to all sound, and now that I reflect I am surprised that I succeeded in retaining my self-possession. I know I sat there rigid, as one held motionless in terror; I only replied in monosyllables to any remark addressed to me, and I knew instinctively that the color had left my

NASAL CATARRH PRODUCES DEAFNESS RELIEF IN PE-RU-NA.

Mr. R. J. Arless, 401 City Hall Ave., Montreal, Quebec, is an old gentleman of wide acquaintance, having served thirty-eight years in the General Post-office of Montreal, a record which speaks for itself. Concerning his use of Peruna, see letter given below.

MR. R. J. ARLESS.

"I have been afflicted with nasal catarrh to such a degree that it affected my hearing."

"This was contracted some twenty years ago by being exposed to draughts and sudden changes of temperature."

"I have been under the treatment of specialists and have used many drugs recommended as specifics for catarrh in the head and throat—all to no purpose."

"About three years ago I was induced by a confere in office to try Peruna."

"After some hesitation, as I had doubts as to results after so many failures, I gave Peruna a trial, and am happy to state that after using eight or ten bottles of Peruna I am much improved in hearing, and in breathing through the nostrils."

as if by the natural movement of my body, commenced to work it aside.

The music ceased, and even though all my attention was not centred upon my investigations, I congratulated Mabel upon her accurate execution. Hickman was standing beside her, and together they began to search for some piece he had requested her to play, while Miss Wells, with her heart and elephants jingling, turned to me and commenced to talk. By this I was, of course interrupted; nevertheless, some ten minutes later, I rose, and naturally turned back to straighten the rumpled antimacassar. In doing so I managed to lift it and glance beneath.

In an instant the truth was plain. Concealed beneath that square of green crocheted-work was a large dark-brown stain upon the brocade. It was the mark of the life-blood of that thin, well-dressed, unknown victim, who had, in an instant, been struck to the heart!

The shock of its discovery caused me to start, but next instant I smoothed out the antimacassar into its former place without attracting any attention, and passed across the room with the motive of inspecting an object which I well remembered discovering when I had made my blind search. Upon a pedestal of black marble stood an exquisite little statuette of a Neapolitan dancing-woman, undoubtedly the work of some Portia—combined together so equally and so harmoniously that I could scarcely say that one quality predominated over the other. Her dignity was imposing, and stolid rather upon the defensive; her submission, though unbounded, was not passive, and thus she stood wholly distinct in her sweetness from any woman I had ever met.

The following day was one on which she was due to take her music-lesson, and I inquired whether I might, as usual, meet her and escort her across the Park.

"You are really very kind," she responded; "but I fear I take up far too much of your time."

"Not at all," I hastened to assure her. "I always enjoy our walks together."

She smiled, but a moment later said—"I fear that I shall be prevented from going to Hanover Square to-morrow, as I shall be making calls with mother. We've been neglecting to call of late, and have such a host to make."

"Then I shan't see you at all to-morrow?" I said in deep disappointment.

"No, I fear not," she answered. "As a matter of fact, my movements for the next few days are rather uncertain."

"But you'll write and tell me when you are free?" I urged earnestly.

"If you wish," she responded, smiling sweetly. Apparently she was in no wise averse to my companionship, a fact which had become to me more apparent now that she had induced her mother to invite me to their table.

I endeavored to extract from her some appointment, but she only whispered—

"Remember that our meetings are clandestine. Don't let them overhear us. Let's change the subject." And then she began to discuss several of the latest novels.

She had apparently a wide knowledge of French fiction, for she explained how a friend of hers, an old schoolfellow, who had married a French baron and lived in Paris, sent her regularly all the notable novels. Of English fiction, too, she was evidently a constant reader, for she told me much about recent novels that I was unaware of, and criticized the style in a manner which betrayed a deep knowledge of her subject.

"One would almost think you were a lady novelist, or a book-reviewer," I remarked, in response to a sweeping condemnation which she made regarding the style of a much-belated writer.

"Well, personally, I like books with some grit in them," she declared. "I can't stand either the so-called problem novel, or a story interlarded with dialect. If any one wants nasty problems, let them spend a few shillings in the works of certain French writers, who turn out books on the most unwholesome themes they can imagine, and fondly believe themselves realists. We don't want these queue-de-siecle works in England. Let us stick to the old-fashioned story of love, adventure, or romance. English writers are now beginning to see the mistake they once made in trying to follow the French style, and are returning to the real legitimate novel of action—the one that interests and grips from the first page to the last."

She spoke sensibly, and I expressed my entire accord with her opinion. But this discussion was only in order to hide our exchange of confidences uttered in an undertone while Hickman and the two ladies were chatting at the further end of the room.

All the time I was longing to get a sight of the interior of the adjoining apartment, the room whence had burst forth that woman's agonized cry in the stillness of the night. I racked my brain to find some means of entering there, but could devise none. A guest can hardly wander over his hostess's house on the first occasion he receives an invitation. Besides, to betray any interest in the house might, I reflected, arouse some suspicion. To be successful in these inquiries would necessitate the most extreme caution.

The fragrant odor of peau d'Espagne exhaled by her chiffons seemed to hold me powerless.

The gilt clock with its swinging girl had already struck eleven on its silver bell, and been re-echoed by another clock in the hall playing the Westminster chimes, when suddenly Mrs. Anson

"Except one," he interposed. "There's one based on the law of averages, which must turn up in your favor if you're only patient enough. The reason why it is so difficult is because it's such a long and tedious affair."

"Explain it," I urged, for a new system that was infallible was, to me, of greatest interest. I had, in the days before my blindness, made a study of the chances at roulette, and had played carefully upon principles which had, to me, appeared most natural. The result had been that with care I had won—not much, it was true—but it was better than leaving one's money to swell the company's dividends.

"The system," he said, tossing off his glass of curacao at one gulp, "is not at all a complicated one. If you study the permanences of any table—you can get them from the Gazette Rose—you'll find that each day the largest number of times either color comes up in succession is nine. Now, all you have to do is to go to a table at the opening of the play, and taking one color, red or black, it makes no difference, stake up on it, and allow your money to accumulate until it is sweet away. If the color you stake upon comes up eight times in succession, and you have originally staked twenty francs, your gains lying on the table will amount to two thousand five hundred and sixty francs. Even then, don't touch it. The color must, in the law of averages, come up nine times in succession each day, taking the week through. If comes up, you'll win five thousand and twenty francs for the louis you staked, and then at once leave the table, for it will just as you had explained it to me. The trend of the conversation was, however, lost to me. My ears closed to all sound, and now that I reflect I am surprised that I succeeded in retaining my self-possession. I know I sat there rigid, as one held motionless in terror; I only replied in monosyllables to any remark addressed to me, and I knew instinctively that the color had left my countenance. The discovery was as bewildering as it was unexpected.

Every detail of that handsome room was exactly as I pictured it. The blind, with their keen sense of touch, are quick to form mental impressions of places and things, and the general character of this apartment I had riveted upon my mind with the fidelity of a photograph.

The furniture was of gilt, just as I had detected from its smoothness, and covered with a rich brocade in wide stripes of red green and dull red-brown—an extremely handsome pattern; the carpet was dark, with a pile so thick that one's feet fell noiselessly; the three long windows, covered by heavy curtains of brocade to match the furniture, reached from the high-pointed ceiling to the ground, exactly as I had found them in my blind gropings. About the room were two or three tables with glass tops, in trays beneath which were collections of choice bric-a-brac, including some wonderful Chinese carvings in ivory, while before the fireplace was spread the great tiger-skin, with paws and head preserved, which I so well remembered.

I sat there speechless, breathless. Not a single detail was there wanting. Never before, in all my life, had amazement held me so absolutely dumfounded.

Close to where I sat was a spacious couch, over the centre of which was thrown an antimacassar of silken crochework. It was covered with the same brocade as the rest of the furniture, and I stretched forth my hand with feigned carelessness and touched it. Its contact was the same, its shape exact; its position in the room identical.

Upon that very couch I had reclined while the foul tragedy had been enacted in that room. My head swam; I closed my eyes. The great gilt clock, with its pendulum representing the figure of a girl swinging beneath the trees, standing on the mantelshelf, ticked out low and musically, just as it had done on that fateful night. In an instant, as I sat with head turned from my companions and my eyes shut, the whole of that tragic scene was re-enacted. I heard the crash, the woman's scream, the awe-stricken exclamation that followed in the inner room. I heard, too, the low swish of a woman's skirts, the heavy blow struck by an assassin's hand and in horror felt the warm life-blood of the unknown victim as it trickled upon my hand.

Mabel suddenly ran her white fingers over the keys, and the music brought me back to a realization of my true position. I had at length discovered the actual house in which the mysterious tragedy had been enacted, and it became impressed upon me that by the exercise of greatest care I might further be enabled to prosecute secret investigations to a successful issue, and at length solve the enigma.

My eyes fixed themselves upon the couch. It was the very spot where I had rested, sightless and helpless, while those strange events had taken place about me. Was it any wonder that I became filled with apprehensions, or that I sat there petrified as one turned to stone?

The square, dark-green antimacassar had been placed in the extreme centre of the couch, and sewed down in order to keep it in its place. Where I was sitting fortunately in the shadow, and when Mabel commenced playing I rose—unsteadily I think—and re-seated myself upon the couch, as being more comfortable. Then, while the woman who held me entranced played a selection from the "Trovatore," I, unnoticed by the others, succeeded in breaking the stitches which tacked the antimacassar to the brocade. The feat was a difficult one, for one does not care to be detected tearing the furniture of one's hostess. Nevertheless, after ten minutes or so, I succeeded in loosening it, and then, to start, but next instant I smoothed out the antimacassar into its former place without attracting any attention, and passed across the room with the motive of inspecting an object which I well remembered discovering when I had made my blind search. Upon a pedestal of black marble stood an exquisite little statuette of a Neapolitan dancing-woman, undoubtedly the work of some Italian master. Without pausing to examine it, I took in its every detail as I passed. It was exactly as I had felt it, and in the selfsame spot as on that fatal night.

Beside the couch, as I turned again to look, I saw that a large skin rug had been thrown down. Without doubt it had been placed there to conceal the ugly stain of blood upon the carpet.

And yet there, on the scene of one of the foulest and most cowardly assassinations, we were actually spending the evening quietly, as became a respectable household! The thing seemed absolutely incredible. A dozen times I endeavored to persuade myself that the whole discovery was but a chimera, arising from my disordered imagination. Nevertheless, it was impossible to disguise from myself the fact that in every detail the truth was borne out. In that very room the unknown man had been struck dead. The marks of his blood still remained as evidence of the truth.

I saw that beside the high lamps at that moment in use, there was a magnificent candelabra suspended from the ceiling, and in this were electric lamps. Then, at the door, I noticed the switch, and knew that it was the same which I had heard turned off by the assassin before leaving the house.

At the end of the room, too, were the folding-doors, now concealed by curtains. It was through these very doors that Edna, my mysterious protectress, had passed and repassed to that inner room whence had come the sound of champagne being uncorked and the woman's piercing scream.

Mabel leaned over and spoke to me, whereupon I sank again into the chair I had previously occupied. She began to chat, but although her beautiful eyes held me fixed, and her face seemed more handsome than any I had ever seen, the diamonds in her hair dazzled my eyes, and I fear that my responses were scarcely intelligible.

"You are not quite yourself to-night. I think," she remarked at last, rising from the piano, and taking the low chair that I drew up for her. "Are you unwell?"

"Why?" I asked, laughing. "Because you look rather pale. What's the matter?"

"Nothing," I answered, as carelessly as I could. "A slight headache. But it has passed now."

My eyes wandered to those curtains of green plush. How I longed to enter that room beyond!

At that moment she took out her handkerchief. Even that action added to the completion of the mental picture I had formed. Her tiny square of lawn and lace exhaled a sweet odor. It was that of peau d'Espagne, the same subtle perfume used by the mysterious Edna! It filled my nostrils until I seemed intoxicated by its fragrance combined with her beauty.

Her dress was discreetly décolleté, and as she sat chatting to me with that bright vivaciousness which was so charming, her white neck slowly heaved and fell. She had, it seemed, been striving all the evening to get a tete-a-tete chat with me, but the chatter of that dreadful Irritating Woman and the requests made by Hickman had prevented her.

As she gossiped with me, now and then waving her big feather fan, she conveyed to my mind an impression of extreme simplicity in the midst of the most wonderful complexity. She seemed to take the peculiar traits from many characters, and so mingle them that, like the combination of hues in a sunbeam, the effect was as one to the eye. I had studied her carefully each time we had met, and had found that she had something of the romantic enthusiasm of a Juliet, of the truth and constancy of a Helen, of the dignified purity of an Isabel, of the tender sweetness of a "Daisy" of the self-possession and intellect of a ful in these inquiries would necessitate the most extreme caution.

The fragrant odor of peau d'Espagne exhaled by her chiffons seemed to hold me powerless.

The gilt clock with its swinging girl had already struck eleven on its silver bell, and been re-echoed by another clock in the hall playing the Westminster chimes, when suddenly Mrs. Anson, with a book in her hand, looked across to her daughter, saying—

"Mabel, dear, I've left my glasses on the table in the library. Will you kindly fetch them for me?"

In an instant I saw my chance, and, jumping to my feet, offered to obtain them. At first she objected, but finding me determined, said—

"The library is the next room, there. You'll find them on the writing-table. Mother always leaves them there. It's really too bad to thus make a servant of you. I'll ring for Arnold."

"No, no," I protested, and at once went eagerly in search of them.

ANXIOUS MOMENTS

FOR YOUNG MOTHERS

The hot weather months are an anxious time for all mothers, but particularly for young mothers. They are the most fatal months in the year for babies and young children, because of the great prevalence of stomach and bowel troubles. These come almost without warning, and often before the mother realizes that there is danger the little one may be beyond aid. It is the duty of every mother to use all reasonable precautions to ward off summer complaints. For this purpose no other medicine can equal Baby's Own Tablets. An occasional dose will keep the stomach and bowels free from offending matter, and will ensure the little ones good health. If the trouble comes unexpectedly the Tablets will speedily cure it. Every home, therefore, should keep the Tablets on hand always; they may be the means of saving your child's life. They are guaranteed free from opiates and narcotics, and may be given with perfect safety to a new born babe. Sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

"I won't say marriage is a failure," he said, angrily; "but some are more fortunate in what they get than others." She laughed annoyingly. "You are right," she said. "You, for instance, got me; but I—got only you."

Why go limping and whining about your corns when a 25-cent bottle of Holloway's Corn Cure will remove them? Give it a trial and you will not regret it.

FROM GIRLHOOD TO MIDDLE LIFE

All Women Need the Rich, Red Blood Dr. Williams' Pink Pills Actually Make.

From girlhood to middle life the health and happiness of every woman depends on her blood. If her blood is poor and watery she becomes weak, languid, pale and nervous. If her blood supply is irregular she suffers from headaches and backaches and other unspeakable distress which only women know. At every stage of a woman's life Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are her best friend, because they actually make the rich, red blood which gives health and strength and tone to every organ of the body. They help a woman just when nature makes the greatest demand upon her blood supply. Mrs. H. Gagnon, who for twenty years has been one of the best known residents of St. Roches, Que., says:—"Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have been a blessing to me. I was weak, worn out and scarcely able to drag myself about. I suffered from headaches and dizziness, my appetite was poor and to attempt housework left me utterly worn out. I slept badly at night and what sleep I got did not refresh me. For nearly three years I was in this condition and was constantly taking medicine, but found no benefit from it. One of my neighbors who had used Dr. Williams' Pink Pills with much benefit, advised me to try them. I did so, and the whole story is told in the words 'I am well again.' There are times yet when I take the pills for they seem to me a guarantee against the troubles which so many women suffer."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills do not act on the bowels. They contain just the elements that actually make new blood and strengthen the nerves. That's why they cure anaemia, indigestion, rheumatism, lumbago, headaches, backaches, heart palpitation and skin diseases like pimples and eczema. That is why they are the greatest help in the world for growing girls who need new blood and for women who are troubled with irregular health. Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

WEEKLY MARKET LETTER.

A. J. Pattison & Co., Toronto, in their weekly market letter, report as follows: The Canadian Banks report an increase of over $6,000,000 in deposits of the Canadian public, and a decrease of loans in Canada of $5,700,000 for the month—not an unusual condition for this time of the year. Mexican Power to which attention has been called when selling at 46 as probably going on a dividend basis, has advanced to 57, and as intimated, a dividend of 1 per cent. has been declared payable in July. It is not stated that this is a quarterly payment, but the earnings warrant this expectation. Rio will materially reduce expenses by the completion of the water power system, coal being an expensive fuel in that district. The net earnings should show large increase within the next sixty days. The American markets, which have suffered a reaction owing to the Presidential nominations, offer attractive dividend investments in such standard issues as Northern Pacific, Great Northern, Pennsylvania and St. Paul. Industrials have advanced steadily, but still show large earnings in prices quoted for standard corporations. We doubt if the present condition of trade in United States warrants the advances, but certainly no more promising crop conditions have existed for many years than are now general throughout Canada and the United States.

Cobalt shares have advanced generally. The expected dividends on a number of shipping mines have been realized. Crown, Dominion, and...

RESCUE SCHOOL.

Will Learn How to Rescue Miners in Case of Accident.

Recent terrible colliery explosions will draw fresh attention to the new Rescue Training School which has been established in Lancashire, England.

This school is fitted with an imitation coal mine gallery, looking from the inside of the hall something like a huge aquarium, having a plate glass front, so that spectators can see what is going on.

Some test "rescues" were recently made in the imitation gallery. Miners, attired in special safety outfits and carrying safety lamps, traversed the workings of the gallery, with the object of rescuing other miners who were supposed to be entombed. An atmosphere rendered deadly by dense fumes of sulphur had been injected into the gallery, and the "rescuers" had to find and bring away a dummy figure, supposed to be unconscious, and weighing over 12 stone.

While working in the gallery the "rescue" party had to overcome all the obstacles usual in a mine disaster. Dangerous portions of the roof had to be retimbered, piles of debris cleared away, and the apparatus used in mine ventilation had to be put into operation. It was a tight yard by yard, and the first test occupied two hours, during which time the men remained in the deadly atmosphere, medical officers, of course, being in attendance to render aid should any of the competitors be overcome.

At this Lancashire school men can be trained so as to form rescue brigades for service in the real disaster which are so constantly taking place.

CRAMP RINGS.

Once Highly Recommended by the Medical Profession in England.

Formerly it was customary for kings of England on Good Friday to hallow certain rings, the wearing of which prevented cramp or epilepsy.

They were made from the metal of decayed coffins and consecrated with an elaborate ceremony, some details of which are still preserved. They were "highly recommended by the medical profession" about 1557, for Andrew Boorde, in his "Breviary of Health," speaking of cramp, says: "The Kynges Majestic hath a great helpe in this matter in hallowing Crampe Ringes without money or petition."

Occasionally cramp rings played a persuasive part in diplomacy. Lord Berners, British Ambassador at the Court of Charles V., wrote in 1508 "to my Lorde Cardinal's grace" for some "crampe ringes," with trust to "bestowe them well, by God's grace."

DO YOU WORK A FARM?

FOR FUN OR FOR PROFIT

You are a farmer, you cultivate the soil, you grow fruit, vegetables, wheat, oats; you raise cattle, sheep; you are interested in horses, in short, you are master of all you survey. Farmers are the most prosperous class of people in Canada to-day, therefore, you are getting rich. No? Bad crops? Drought? Oh, a leak in your costs department. Economy begins at home—plant a Bicycle on the farm and reap a harvest of saved time, money, and shoe leather.

For the odd message in'to town, to the post-office, to the store, for a hurry-call to the doctor, the Bicycle saves time and SAVES THE HORSE.

A horse eats oats—a bicycle won't. The Massey Silver Ribbon, Cleveland, Brantford, Perfect, Imperial and Rambler Bicycles are all built for service and satisfaction in rigid and Cushion Frame models.

advances, but certainly no more promising crop conditions have existed for many years than are now general throughout Canada and the United States.

Cobalt shares have advanced generally. The expected dividends on a number of shipping mines have been realized. Crown Reserve 4 per cent, Temiskaming 3 per cent and City of Cobalt 5 per cent. are among the recent declarations from mines which have not heretofore been regular dividend payers.

It is stated on apparently good authority that Trethewey will be placed on a dividend basis within the next month. Recent earnings appear to warrant from 3 per cent. to 5 per cent. quarterly. Reports from the mine show sufficient development to warrant expectation of a continuation of dividends. McKinley-Dar, is also expected to declare quarterly dividends, beginning in July. Recent quotations are: Crown Reserve 47-49x div; Temiskaming 44-46; City of Cobalt 1.72. Trethewey 82-84, buyers 60 days; 90; McKinley-Dar, 76. 68. LaRose, the new Cobalt merger, which was placed in New York at $4.75, has sold up to $5.13. Shipping Cobalt mines may be considered a fair speculative investment. We think that the other stocks should be left alone for the time being until the properties have given evidence of values.

ARMY GROWING SOBER.

Figures Which Show That Tommy Atkins is Drinking Less.

The British army is getting more sober every day. In every military centre the Army Temperance Society is growing in size and influence. Tommy Atkins is becoming a model of sobriety. Among the Windsor garrison exclusively composed of guards there is so little drunkenness among the troops, either horse or foot, that the Windsor magistrates have not had a soldier before them charged with drunkenness for many months. There may be mild cases, but they are dealt with by the regimental authorities. Very little wine is now drunk at the officers' mess in the Brigade of Guards. Mineral waters take the place of strong drink at luncheon, and even at dinner the officers are very abstemious.

Mother Graves' Worm Exterminator is pleasant to take; sure and effectual in destroying worms. Many have tried it with best results.

A cattle drive took place from a farm on the Rodney estate, near Castlereagh, which is held on the eleven months' system, the cattle being driven on to the public road and scattered, but were subsequently recovered and restored to the farm by the police.

Through indiscretion in eating green fruit in summer many children become subject to cholera morbus caused by irritating acids that act violently on the lining of the intestines. Pains and dangerous purgings ensue and the delicate system of the child suffers under the strain. In such cases the safest and surest medicine is Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial. It will check the inflammation and save the child's life.

Great Things From Little Causes Grow.—It takes very little to derange the stomach. The cause may be slight, a cold, something eaten or drunk, anxiety, worry, or some other simple cause. But if precautions be not taken, this simple cause may have most serious consequences. Many a chronically debilitated constitution to-day owes its destruction to simple causes not dealt with in time. Keep the digestive apparatus in healthy condition and all will be well. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills are better than any other for the purpose.

"Ignorance," remarked the talkative youth, "they say is bliss." "Oh, that probably accounts for it," rejoined the old gentleman. "Accounts for what?" queried the youth. "The contented and happy look you usually wear," the other replied.

FRANCE'S PREMIER A WORKER.

M. Clemenceau Dwells in Modest Apartment.

M. Georges Clemenceau, Premier of the French Republic, has been called the busiest man in France, and one of the least obtrusive. He earns little for show, but has an immense capacity for work.

Instead of living in the magnificent palace provided for the one occupying his position, M. Clemenceau prefers to dwell in a modest apartment on the Rue Franklin, which he has occupied for many years. He lives quite alone, except for a cook and a manservant, and entertains only his most intimate friends, which means very few people. The apartment is on the ground floor and opens on a garden overlooking the Seine and a beautiful panorama of the city. His pets are a handsome white bull terrier and many large birds, such as storks, peacocks and barnyard fowl. Each morning at 5 o'clock M. Clemenceau gets up and goes through gymnastic exercises, which are followed by a cold plunge. At 7 he has his breakfast which is his heaviest meal, and consists of about a dozen eggs and some cold meat. He never drinks anything but water, except when obliged to do otherwise at a banquet.

A Pleasant Medicine.—There are some pills which have no other purpose evidently than to beget painful internal disturbances in the patient, adding to his troubles and perplexities rather than diminishing them. One might as well swallow some corrosive material. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills have not this disagreeable and injurious property. They are easy to take, and are not unpleasant to the taste, and their action is mild and soothing. A trial of them will prove this. They offer peace to the dyspeptic.

TWO DIE BY A LIVE WIRE

Two Thousand Volts Passed Through Hamilton Carpenters' Bodies.

A despatch from Hamilton, Ont., says: There was a double electrocution on Wednesday afternoon at the B. Greening Wire Company's plant on Queen Street North. The victims were Geo. Bambrick, 167 Canada Street, and Arthur Scott, 111 Florence Street. They were employed as carpenters and had been engaged all day in building a frame shed adjoining the works. Over their heads ran the high tension power wires which supplied the factory. The wires were supported in the usual way and held firm by guy wires running to the ground. In order to go on with their work the carpenters found it necessary to remove the guy wires, as they were in the way. In loosening the wires they sagged considerably, so much so that they came in contact with the power wires.

The current under a high voltage was sufficient to kill both men instantly. George Locke, another carpenter, was close by when the accident happened, and as quickly as he could secured a ladder and pushed the guy wires away from the power wires. In the meantime, however, the current had been discharged into the bodies of the two unfortunate men, their clothing and parts of his flesh being badly burned.

The power was turned off and the works closed for the day. The police were notified and the ambulance was sent, but as it was seen that the men were dead the patrol wagon was despatched and the remains taken to the morgue at the City Hospital.

Ewes were down 25 to 35c per cwt. Spring lambs dropped from 50 to 75c each. Prices were:—Ewes, $4 to $4.25 per cwt.; Spring lambs, $3 to $5.25 each.

Hogs were firm on reported advances in the prices of bacon at Liverpool. Selects sold at $6.30, and lights and fats at $6.05 per cwt.

THE 'PHONE TRIUMPHS.

It is Replacing the Telegraph in Railway Work.

A despatch from Montreal says: At the convention of railway telegraph superintendents it was announced that in the last six months 6,000 miles of phone wires have been built to replace the telegraph lines as despatching lines on railways. This announcement was made by W. W. Rider of the Chicago Burlington & Quincy Railway. This 6,000 miles includes the 46 miles of the C. P. R. between here and Farnham. The convention was much impressed as the speaker went on to say that the 'phone had without doubt proved its success, and the operators were very enthusiastic. It was certain to replace the telegraph.

Fashion Hints.

FADS AND FANCIES.

Shell necklaces from Honolulu are considered stunning.

Satin stripes are clever on anything from mull to cloth.

In dresses stripes are used in any way that one's taste may dictate.

Handkerchiefs as well as parasols are often bordered.

Some low cut shoes are bordered with narrow bands of contrasting leather.

Black silk stockings and patent leather pumps are to be much worn with dressy costumes.

Pale blue cotton voile makes a pretty and inexpensive dancing dress for summer resorts.

Fancy coats are bordered with inlays and hats are bordered with contrasting half-facings.

Silk muslin gowns with cloth hems continue the rage for heavy finishes for the bottoms of skirts.

A novelty in hosiery is a pair of black silk stockings inset with a pair of Chantilly lace butterflies.

Pongee makes the nicest dust coats for those living in the suburbs, who find such a wrap indispensable.

Tobacco brown ties, exactly matching the linen suits that were so popular with women last summer, are being worn by men.

Owls—the whole bird, head, body and claws—trim a smart leghorn hat of a natural color with an underfacing of brown chip.

Medallions of lace and embroidery, which for a couple of seasons have been in disfavor, are again making their re-appearance in the modish trimming.

A hat of green straw lined with blue straw and trimmed with a high crown band of blue taffeta, together with an uprising shaft of blue aigrettes, tipped with green, is considered stylish.

The only note of color in a gown, in many cases, is the addition of a large rose, which is worn in the centre of the corsage, and which, both as regards size and color, is the exact twin to that in the hat.

A dressy hat for wear with a dark blue tailored suit is of dark blue straw with its crown encircled with a garland of red and pink velvet sweet peas, ending in front beneath a skeleton bow of dark blue velvet ribbon.

So pretty are the juvenile adaptations of present modes that the most of us wish that, like Peter Pan, we had never grown up. One charming little dress which is designed for a girl of from 3 to 6 is of blue Scotch gingham trimmed with bordered bands and blue ribbon.

The kimono sleeves are tucked horizontally after the fashion of the grown-ups, and the plain front breadth reassures the popularity of the panel.

Some of the most attractive of muslin frocks are those which are inset with narrow valencennes inset on, while the spaces between each band are embroidered in darned peas in washing silk, in sizes varying from a dime to a quarter.

An overlapping chain of dots outlines the graduating panel in front of finely cut muslin, which is continued on to the bodice in the form of a square bib.

Accident on C. P. R.'s New Western Extension Near Tottenham.

A despatch from Tottenham, Ont., says: The C. P. R. train for Winnipeg, which left Toronto on Saturday night carrying two hundred passengers, was derailed about two miles north of Tottenham at 11.40 p.m. Five coaches were thrown down an embankment between fifteen and twenty feet, four turning completely over.

PANIC ON A STEAMER.

Seventeen Women Drowned in Wreck Off Spanish Coast.

A despatch from Corunna, Spain, says that the Spanish steamer Larache went on the rocks in a fog near Muros, where the cruiser Cardal Cisneros was wrecked in 1905. The Larache sunk rapidly, and a panic followed. There were 97 passengers and 54 of a crew, including stewards, waiters, etc., aboard. These took to the boats, but up to the filing of the despatch only 47 had landed. Defective communications made it impossible to obtain complete details, but latest reports state that 17 women were drowned. It is known that 17 survivors were landed at Muros, but that two of them have since died. Fifteen others were landed at Lon.

KILLED HIMSELF ON TRAIN.

Passenger on C. P. R. Express Blows Out His Brains.

A despatch from Kenora, Ont., says: As No. 96 through express approached Otisland Thursday, a passenger named John McConnell en route from Washington Territory to Dover, New Hampshire, suddenly retired to the dressing room and shot himself through the head. Upon hearing the report passengers pushed the door open, but the unfortunate man was breathing his last. In conversation with fellow-passengers he had complained of ill-health, expressing the opinion that he could not live much longer. The deceased was about 45 years of age. A daughter living in Winnipeg is the only relative of whom any trace can be found.

Officially Announced That He will Dispose of His Horses.

A despatch from London says: Lord Krollys, the King's private secretary, in replying to a question, replied that his Majesty intends to abandon horse racing.

which left Toronto on Saturday night carrying two hundred passengers, was derailed about two miles north of Tottenham at 11.40 p.m. Five coaches were thrown down an embankment between fifteen and twenty feet, four turning completely over. The tender and baggage and mail cars remained on the track. There were none killed, but two elderly women are seriously injured. In all about twenty-five were injured, some very slightly. The rolling stock and riddled appeared to be in good order, and the train was running about the usual speed.

The passengers were taken to Tottenham early Sunday morning, where they were given every comfort possible, and at one o'clock in the afternoon were conveyed back to the scene of the wreck and passengers and baggage transferred to a special, which took them on their journey. Four of the more seriously hurt and some who did not desire to continue on their journey were taken to Toronto. Although the track will be passable, the cars being thrown free of the road-bed, but it will be days before the coach's will be extricated from the ditch.

GOLD IN THE FRASER.

There is Said to be Gold in Abundance Along the River.

A despatch from Vancouver says: Great interest was excited locally by the statement of Mr. H. A. Bayfield of Bayfield & Archibald, engineers, that preparations are being made by Boston capitalists to dredge for gold in the Fraser. The new company has a three-mile lease on the Fraser River. Three weeks' prospecting yielded such results that an order for plans for a hundred thousand dollar dredge has been placed with Bayfield & Archibald of a capacity of 2,500 feet per day. Mr. Bayfield says there is gold in abundance along the Fraser from Soda Creek down to Yale, the average running twenty cents a yard. He says in one trench on the Lil-loet fifty feet above high water level, the prospect hole, six feet square, yielded an average of 43 cents a yard from the grass roots down. A streak of eighteen feet thickness was struck giving $2 a yard.

G. T. P. RAILS AT MONCTON

Work on the New Intercolonial Shops Is Also Going Ahead Rapidly.

A despatch from Moncton, N. B., says: The Grand Trunk Pacific Railway has entered Moncton quietly. The rails of the new Transcontinental Railway were run into Moncton on Wednesday, and new stretch within a few hundred yards of the I. C. R. depot. Several surveys have recently been made by the G. T. P. engineers, but no one except the railway contractors knew exactly where the new line was to be located. In a single day the rails were laid, and now a steam shovel has been installed and is rapidly excavating the grade. The rails run almost up to the I. C. R. track, and from there will parallel the I. C. R. depot.

Work on this division of the Transcontinental has been going ahead rapidly. Close by the place where the steam shovel is tearing up the ground, in readiness for the permanent rails of the transcontinental, work on the I. C. R. new shops is rapidly going forward, and the Maritime Provinces to-day probably present no busier locality than the west end of this city.

MYTHS OF THE STARS.

(By A. Banker.)

When we look upwards towards the domed canopy of the midnight skies scintillating and flashing in all its glory, the innumerable, sorted array of starry orbs transcendent in many-hued fires, some gleaming in effulgent splendor, some, plunged deep in the illimitable abyss of space, less vivid in their coruscating lustre, and some, sunk even further in the profundity of that mysterious infinity, but mere points of light, we note that the brighter of these glittering suns are arranged in fantastic design which by the exercise of a little imagination may in some cases be resolved into the constellations figured on our celestial globes.

These constellations, or asterisms, were, with a few exceptions, named by the earliest civilized nations of the earth, the Chaldeans and early Greeks especially, in honor of mythological or real personages whose deeds of valor and heroism they desired to commemorate. Thus the strange fable of the birth of Clytemnestra, the beautiful wife of Agamemnon—whose death-mask, of solid gold, found in her sacrophagus, together with that of Agamemnon himself, may now be seen in the fine museum at Athens—is commemorated by the constellation of the Swan; the mixture of fable and fact in the legend of the rescue of the fair Andromeda, the daughter of a King of Ethiopia, by an imaginary being, Perseus, who slew the sea-monster who was about to devour her, has been handed down from age to age ever since that dim, far off epoch in the early history of the world in the constellations which bear their names, and also in those of Cassiopea and Cepheus, Andromeda's parents; or the achievements of Auriga, said to be the inventor of horse-drawn chariots, of Ophiuchus (Asclepius), reputed to be the originator of the healing art, or of Orion, a mighty hunter, real or imaginary it is impossible to say, whose constellation is alluded to by that ancient writer Job himself; all these, with many others, form a memorial written in glittering letters of fire in the skies of heaven of the achievements, some real, some doubtless fabulous and legendary, of the mighty heroes of old.

But there is one gorgeous constellation, perhaps more brilliant and more magnificent than any other in the entire expanse of the universe, a constellation out of the range of vision of those ancient pioneers of astronomy, for it is far down in the Southern Hemisphere—the Southern Cross—which commemorates not the real or fancied achievements of poor mortals, but the wondrous sacrifice of the Son of God, who on the cross of shame made expiation for the sins of all believers by Himself suffering the punishment due to them. And all who would gain a certain inheritance in the Realm of Glory have but to plead that propitiation before the throne of the Almighty, conforming their lives, of course, to His laws.

RUINED BY CANKER WORM.

Great Damage Reported in Nova Scotia Orchards.

A despatch from Halifax, N. S., says: The canker worm has suddenly attacked the fruit region of Nova Scotia and caused immense loss. Blossoming was exceedingly promising and the outlook for a great crop was very hopeful. This has been changed within a week and now a large number of orchards are badly scorched and many others are hard hit by this pest, though in a lesser degree. In some cases foliage in nearly all of the trees has been completely withered. The affected areas extend from end to end. A strange feature is that some orchards where spraying was less carefully practised have escaped, while alongside the most carefully treated trees are affected very seriously. The effect on the whole crop cannot be exactly predicted at this time, but individual losses will be very heavy. The theory is that June rains washed the spray off the trees so that protection of the poison was absent when the at-

INJUSTICE TO CONSUMPTIVES.

In the past few years the public knowledge of the nature of tuberculosis, and of the means by which it is spread, has been greatly increased.

It is universally recognized now that this is an infectious disease, capable of being communicated from the sick to the well, and that an un instructed or a careless consumptive is a menace to the community in which he lives. It is known that his expectoration contains the germs of the disease, and that if it is recklessly deposited on the floors of public buildings or in the street it does, and the bacilli which it contains are carried by the dust to the throats and lungs of others.

So much has been said of this danger, in the effort to suppress the dirty habit of expectoration, that the penitulum has begun to swing too far the other way, and the belief is gaining ground that the consumptive, no matter what his habits or mode of life, is a person to be shunned.

This is cruel, and adds an unnecessary weight to the load of suffering the consumptive has to bear. It has led to the barring of health resorts against the subjects of tuberculosis, to the discharge from their positions of wage-earners who are affected in the slightest degree, and even to attempts to isolate the tuberculous as if they were lepers and pariahs.

It is time in the name of humanity that something was said on the other side, and that the public should be told that a consumptive who is cleanly in his habits, and is careful to destroy the expectorated matter by using paper napkins or specially devised cups which can be burned, is in no sense dangerous to his fellows.

A properly conducted sanatorium, filled with tuberculous patients, is indeed one of the safest places for a person with a supposed tendency to the disease to reside.

A consumptive should not sleep in the same bed with a well person, especially a child, should refrain from kissing others, should not use towels or eating utensils in common, should not talk while directly facing his companion in close proximity, should hold a handkerchief before his mouth when coughing, and should observe the well-known rules regarding expectoration. That is all. If he is careful to observe these simple precautions for the sake of his fellows, the public has no reason to shun him.

He can live at home, can mingle with his family, and go into the society of others without the slightest fear of doing them harm. His lot, like that of any sick person, is a hard one, but it should not be made harder by the ignorant and unreasoning fear of those who have misinterpreted the well-intentioned warnings of physicians.—Youth's Companion.

AIRSHIP SOARED LIKE BIRD

Enormous Mass Sank and Rose, Turned and Stopped at Will of Operator.

A despatch from Friedrichshafen, Germany, says: A second ascent was made on Wednesday evening by Count Zeppelin in his new airship with a view to testing an improved side-steering gear, which has just been installed. On the first ascent Count Zeppelin declared that he was satisfied with everything except the side-steering arrangement, which had not come up to his expectations. This now has been altered, and the change has given excellent results. The test on Wednesday night lasted a little over two hours, during which time the most difficult manoeuvres were carried out without a hitch. The great airship first circled around the Town of Friedrichshafen seven times. It then departed at full speed towards Langenargen, where it crossed to the Swiss side of Lake Constance against a light breeze. Proceeding back across the lake to Lindau, the Count undertook at a height of from three hundred to six hundred feet above the surface of the water a series of manoeuvres, including sinking and rising, turning and stopping, thoroughly testing the new arrangement of both the ascensional and side-steering apparatus, which seemingly worked in a most satisfactory manner. The facility with which a change of direction of the enormous mass in mid-air was accomplished deeply impressed the spectators.

YOUNG FOLKS

THE TEA-SET.

It is hard to be off visiting alone without father and mother, but to be without one's brand-new china tea-set was simply unbearable.

This is the way it had happened. The day before, father had rushed into the house and told Marjorie that she was going to make a short visit at Aunt Ann's. Carrying her little suit case, marked with her initials, she had whisked her off to the station without so much as saying good-bye to mamma and brother. On the way he had explained that he and mother must go away from them all for a while, and she was to stay with Aunt Ann. A friend was to look after her on the train and deliver her into Aunt Ann's hands.

The excitement of the trip kept Marjorie cheerful for a while. Then Aunt Ann had been very kind, and had made her little teeny-weeny biscuits for supper. But that had all been yesterday; to-day she was lonely.

When Aunt Ann had said that the minister's daughter was coming over a little while that afternoon, Marjorie had brightened at the thought of having a little girl to play with, but, alas! a big, grown-up young lady had entered Aunt Ann's little parlor. Miss Alice, however, had very pretty pink cheeks, and smiled in such a way that it was not long before Marjorie was telling her all about papa, mama, brother, and the new tea-set.

"How would you like to make a tea-set?" said Miss Alice, who, smiling and taking Marjorie's hand, led her into the garden. They went straight to the circle of bright poppies, where Miss Alice selected a big poppy-pod from which the petals had all fallen. A straight piece of stem stuck in one side made a spout, while another curved piece was the handle. A tiny bit of stem left on where the pod had been picked was enough for the handle of the cover. Now there was truly a teapot that would not tip over, because the flat part of the pod made a neat little stand.

"And you can make cups and saucers, too!" exclaimed the delighted Marjorie.

Miss Alice said nothing but began to look for some smaller poppy-pods that would stand up nicely. With her little pearl-handled knife she cut off the top, and adding a curved handle of stem, she had a little cup, with a saucer all fastened to it.

Marjorie made the next herself, and escaped, while alongside the most carefully treated trees are affected very seriously. The effect on the whole crop cannot be exactly predicted at this time, but individual losses will be very heavy. The theory is that June rains washed the spray off the trees so that protection of the poison was absent when the attack of the worms came on. It is many years since Nova Scotia orchards were similarly affected.

SWAM THE DEVIL'S HOLE.

The Daring Deed of a One-Armed Buffalo Man.

A despatch from Niagara Falls, N. Y., says: With nothing to protect him but a cork life preserver, George Powell, a one-armed Buffalo man, on Friday afternoon swam through the Devil's Hole Rapids and on to Lewiston. He covered the two and one-half miles in thirty-five minutes. This is a feat which has been performed only twice before. Powell entered the water at the Flat Rock, just below the Whirlpool, and swam directly to the middle of the river. At the turn below the Whirlpool Powell had to desperate struggle to keep above water. At one time he disappeared for sixty seconds. Passing the lower trolley bridge he was tossed about like a cork. Powell had something in reserve at the end of the perilous trip, and reached the deck at Lewiston without difficulty.

He can also go for several days with little or no food, subsisting meantime on the fat stored in the humps on his back, which nature seems to have provided as a storehouse for sustenance in case of absence of food.

A Norwegian inventor has patented a suit of clothes which will protect its wearer against drowning. The clothes are lined with a non-absorbent material made of specially prepared vegetable fibre which without being too heavy will effectually hold up the weight of a man in the water. Twelve ounces of the new material will, it is claimed, save a person from sinking. The invention has been tested with favorable results at Christiania. Successful trials were also made with rugs made of the same material capable of supporting two persons in the water.

Cigars are being made out of chestnut leaves over in England now-a-days. So far, it appears, the custom has not been introduced into this country. Many men were employed in gathering up the dead leaves in the chestnut groves of several big London parks. The leaves are dipped into tobacco juice so that they absorb large quantities of it. These are enclosed in wrappers of real tobacco. While it is declared that smokers are unable to detect the spurious tobacco no attempt is made to get fancy prices for the cigars. They sell for one and two cents apiece.

The letter boxes fly in Hungary. The Post Office Department has devised the aerial letter box to relieve the Budapest postmen, who are few in number and who have hundreds of flights of stairs to climb daily in the great tenement houses. The new letter box can be sent up to its destination from the ground floor by a spring. It stops at the floor required, and remains there until emptied or until the next delivery, when the postman, by touching a spring, can

Miss Alice said nothing but began to look for some smaller poppy-pods that would stand up nicely. With her little pearl-handled knife she cut off the top, and adding a curved handle of stem, she had a little cup, with a saucer all fastened to it.

Marjorie made the next herself, and then they worked together until enough were finished for a large family. "Wouldn't nasturtium leaves make good plates?" suggested Marjorie.

"The very thing," replied Miss Alice. "Now our dishes are all ready, so you may set the table on the flat rock. Then I must go home, for it is nearly my tea-time."

"O, Miss Alice," cried Marjorie, clinging to her, "it's a lovely tea-set, and I don't want you to go, for you are as nice as a truly little girl!"—Youth's Companion.

Jackson is the kind of man who is always seeking gratuitous advice. Not long ago he met a well-known physician at a dinner-party.

Maine newspapers speak of Peter A. Foley, of Portland, as "the most wonderful telegraph operator in the world." Foley is totally deaf, an affliction which ordinarily would be supposed to make telegraphy an utter impossibility to him, but since he became deaf, eight years ago, he has developed what may be called a sixth sense, and by touch and sight he can detect the finest movements of the instrument and correctly interpret them. By means of the sense of touch in his finger tips he takes messages transmitted from the ends of the continent and can also read a message by watching the sounder. With his left forefinger placed lightly on the sounder he can take a message as accurately as the average operator.

BOMB EXPLODED IN CHURCH

Attempt to Kill the Archbishop of Turin Many Persons Injured.

A despatch from Rome says: While Cardinal Agostino Richelmy, Archbishop of Turin, was saying mass in the cathedral at noon on Wednesday in honor of the feast of St. John, the city's patron saint, a petard exploded within the building, making a terrific din. The congregation, which was composed mostly of women, was thrown into a state of panic and made a wild rush for the doors. Many persons were thrown down and trampled upon, some thus receiving severe injuries. Nobody was wounded by the explosion. The petard consisted of a tin box containing gunpowder and revolver cartridges. The effects of the explosion were lessened by the fact that the cartridges did not explode. It is believed that the author of the outrage was seeking the life of the Cardinal Richelmy, to whom the Pope has telegraphed congratulations upon his escape.

immediate investigation should be made, and the Premier thereupon appointed a special committee to hear the charges of Major Hodgins.

This committee sat for a number of days, Major Hodgins gave his evidence. He was cross examined, and finally asked to retire from the proceedings. His solicitor withdrew from the case and it came to an inglorious end.

Much political capital has been made of this, but the scandal, like many others, would not stand the test of close examination, and faded away when confronted with the real facts.

Provision for H. B. Road.

People of the West will be particularly pleased with the action of the minister of the interior in making provision in the new land bill to provide for a sum sufficient to build the Hudson Bay Railroad from Le Pas on the Saskatchewan river to Fort Churchill, on Hudson Bay, a distance of 500 miles. This railway can, it is estimated, be built for $15,000,000. Under the terms of the bill there are 28,000,000 acres of land available. One half of this will be held for homestead and the other half 14,000,000 for preemption at $3 per acre.

If the road costs $15,000,000 to build, 5,000,000 acres at $3 will provide the money to build it. Mr. Oliver was directing his observations to the point that there was provision in the bill to raise new revenue sufficient to build the railroad when the time came, and that point would be taken into consideration if, at any time it was necessary to pledge the country's credit to raise funds to build the railroad.

Good News for the West.

The determination of the Government to encourage in some form the building of the Hudson Bay Railway, will be hailed with delight in the West. Whether the Government builds the road or assists some company to do so, is not of supreme importance in the West, but the fact that the Government are favorably inclined to the immediate construction of the road will be received with delight by the people who have suffered much in the past owing to inadequate transportation facilities. The fact that a new source of revenue has been arranged sufficient to build the road, without being an extra charge upon the country, is of itself a most encouraging circumstance.

Criticism Brings a Retort.

Mr. Foster often makes criticisms which provoke retort from the Government side that makes his argument foolish and inconsistent. This was demonstrated on Tuesday last when he objected to the legal agent of the Government at Halifax employing outside counsel. Mr. E. M. MacDonald of Picou, reminded the House that under the late Conservative Government, Mr. R. L. Borden was the legal agent, and that instead of employing outside counsel when work had to be done away from Halifax, he sent a junior member of his firm from Halifax whose expenses had to be paid by the Government. Mr. MacDonald also proved that when Mr. Borden was legal agent the Government was put to much greater expense than was incurred under the present system.

Foster Makes Wild Assertions.

Mr. Foster has an unbridled tongue. He makes violent attacks upon the policy of the Government and the administration of the departments. He does not hesitate to describe as scandalous something which he refers to as the "Siftonian cult." He recently stated without a shadow of evidence that an officer of the department of the interior retired behind closed doors, and in a secluded room opened tenders for timber in secret.

Verdict for Dr. Pierce

AGAINST THE

Ladies' Home Journal.

Sending truth after a lie. It is an old maxim that "a lie will travel seven leagues while truth is getting its boots on," and no doubt hundreds of thousands of good people read the unwarranted and malicious attack upon Dr. R. V. Pierce and his "Favorite Prescription" published in the May (1905) number of the Ladies' Home Journal, with its great black display headings, who never saw the humble, groveling retraction, published two months later. It was boldly charged in the scurrilous and libelous article that Dr. Pierce's "Favorite Prescription" for the cure of woman's weaknesses and ailments, contained alcohol and other harmful ingredients. Dr. Pierce promptly brought suit against the publishers of the Ladies' Home Journal, for $200,000 damages.

Dr. Pierce alleged that Mr. Bok, the editor, maliciously published the article containing such false and defamatory matter with the intent of injuring his business, furthermore, that no alcohol, or other injurious, or habit-forming, drugs are, or ever were, contained in his "Favorite Prescription"; that said medicine is made from native medicinal roots and contains no harmful ingredients whatever, and that Mr. Bok's malicious statement were wholly and absolutely false.

The retraction printed by said Journal they were forced to acknowledge that they had obtained analyses of "Favorite Prescription" from eminent chemists, all of whom certified that it did not contain alcohol or any of the alleged harmful drugs! These facts were also proven in the trial of the action in the Supreme Court. But the business of Dr. Pierce was greatly injured by the publication of the libelous article with its great display headings, while hundreds of Trust Company, and their speculating with the funds in securities not permitted to the Foresters' organization, the time was opportune to investigate, and the time is opportune now to keep the people reminded that the man who did this is the same Mr. Foster who is eternally criticizing the Government.

Evidence Was Conclusive.

The evidence of the Insurance Commission clearly proves that Mr. Foster took a commission of 25 cents an acre as alleged against him, and his denial in face of the evidence goes for naught. The Minister of Justice made the direct accusation against Mr. Foster to his face in the House, and he also pointed to another instance in which out of the manipulations of the Great West Land Company there was a rake-off amounting to $4,320, divided among men of whom Mr. Foster was one, and this money Mr. Aylesworth flatly stated, had been divided between Mr. Foster and some associates.

Mr. Foster has absolutely no cause of complaint. The men whom he maligns daily, men whose conduct has never been such as to require investigation at the hands of a royal commission, have very good cause of complaint, but they look somewhat at the source of the criticism and do not raise questions of privilege.

The people require in the person of an aspirant to cabinet honors a high standard of morality, and when they find an individual who is a tireless critic of the Government, they are inclined to examine more carefully into the record of such an one, and therefore the findings of the Royal Commission

POLITICAL NEWS!

One of the features of the week was the total collapse of the Hodgins inquiry. Some time ago Major Hodgins, an engineer employed on the National Transcontinental Railway, published in certain coast newspapers very serious charges in which he alleged that owing to improper classification the work of building the railroad under his charge was costing the country millions of dollars more than was right. These charges conveyed the impression that the contractors were reaping a large sum of money in excess of what would be just, in consequence of such improper classification. It was also charged that representations had been made to the Commissioners in charge of building the railway and that no redress could be secured.

The Conservative party promptly seized upon the incidents and made them the subject of attack in the House.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier brought the matter to the attention of the chairman of the Transcontinental Railway Commission, who announced that an stated without a shadow of evidence that an officer of the department of the interior retired behind closed doors, and in a secluded room opened tenders for timber in secret.

Siftonian cult, as understood by Mr. Foster, means something disgraceful, something dishonorable; and yet, although Mr. Sifton has constantly invited him to make a charge of some sort, he has not done so, he contents himself with insulting allusions. When alleging that a departmental officer acted as described above, he meant that he retired in secret to do some dishonorable thing in collusion with other persons, but he feared to charge the gentleman direct with doing anything which would call for investigation. In both cases he held up reputable gentlemen to the contempt of the people, and without any evidence or warrant.

He Resents Criticism.

Now, when the strictures passed upon him by the Royal Commission on Insurance are alluded to in a mild way upon a question of fact, substantiated by a letter over his own signature, he squeals at once, and brings the matter up in the House in a question of privilege.

How Foster Took Commission.

The facts are as follows: In this correspondence some months ago the statement was made that Mr. Foster "condemns the middlemen who makes a profit, but he was willing to make a profit of 25c an acre on the lands sold by Roblin to the company of which he (Mr. Foster) was manager."

To this statement Mr. Foster said in the House last week: "That is an absolute untruth, there is no basis for it at all." Well, let me see what basis there is for it, and how far the statement was untrue.

This is What he Wrote.

On January 5, 1904, Mr. Foster wrote the following letter:

Toronto, Jan. 5, 1904.

"Yours of January 2, duly received re Pritchard sale of Swan river district lands. The contracts will be with the Union Trust Company in trust. Cash payment will be made to credit of vendors in Standard Bank of Toronto on receipt and signing of satisfactory documents of agreements. standard of morality, and when they find an individual who is a tireless critic of the Government, they are inclined to examine more carefully into the record of such an one, and therefore the findings of the Royal Commission on Insurance become a proper subject for discussion in the public press. Mr. Foster should take the mote out of his own eye before taking the beam out of the eye of another.

People Thinking For Themselves.

The fact that people are reading the political history of the country and writing for explanations is a circumstance which speaks well for the intelligence of the community. It would be well if these inquiries continue. Mr. Foster takes the ground that there should be a higher standard of political morality in the country. This is desirable, and a good method is to scrutinize carefully the record of all men who aspire to high positions in the service of the country. Surely Mr. Foster should be the last man to complain of this. He was overjoyed when the Civil Service Commissioners reported adversely upon the workings of one of the departments, but he evinced no delight when the Insurance Commissioners reported adversely to himself.

If the people of the country are unduly suspicious, and inclined to examine closely into the actions of men who control or desire to control, public affairs, they have been educated in this line of thought largely through the instrumentality of Mr. Foster, and he has no just cause of complaint if their attention is called to his doings with regard to the trust funds of the Foresters, which he succeeded in concealing in the coffers of the Union Trust Company, only to emerge and be used in transactions which were not permitted by the Foresters' organization itself.

Rule Works Both Ways.

A rule that won't work both ways is not a safe guide, and if there is any compensating feature about the caustic and often illtimed criticism of Mr. Foster, it is that the course he has adopted has had the effect of directing more attention to himself than would have been the case under other circumstances.

One of the accusations constantly made by Mr. Foster against the present Government is that middlemen conceal their operations under other names, and the people, whose money is being paid out, don't know who is getting it. Mr. Foster was an adept at this kind of manipulation. The history of the Union Trust Company and the Great West Land Company shows how skillfully he secured funds from one organization, which could not do a certain class of business, and put them into another company which was not hampered by the same restrictions, and thus secured the use of money which he would not have been able to use under the primary conditions.

The middleman who deals with the

Yours truly,

(Signed) GEORGE E. FOSTER

Accordingly a cheque for $2,480 or 25 cents an acre on 9,920 acres, was issued to Mr. Foster. This, said Mr. Aylesworth in the House, was trust money, money of the Foresters, and, although concealed in the Union Trust Company, became a proper subject for inquiry into whose pocket the money went, they are assailed by Mr. Foster as being false to every principle of honor, and accused of desiring his political downfall.

Case Clear as Day.

Here was the case alluded to which Mr. Foster declares untrue. Mr. Foster would have dated upon such a transaction as this work all the force of his extensive vocabulary had it occurred between a Liberal and the parties to it. By him such a transaction would have been prescribed as a rake-off and startling instance of graft.

If Mr. Foster enters the political arena and gives hard blows, he must expect to receive some heavy ones in return, and it will become him to raise a question of privilege upon the publication of an incident in his career brought to light in evidence given before a royal commission.

Foster Reaping Whirlwind.

Complaint is made by Mr. Foster that political capital is being made from the findings of this commission. Why should this not be done? He poses as the leading critic of the Government, innocent transactions of every day life are magnified by him into evil designs upon the public purse. Men who conduct their official business in an honorable straightforward manner are stigmatized as rascals by the man who is very sensitive when his own affairs are called into question.

The question might properly be asked, why should these matters be kept secret? The people have the right to know what the commissioners found wrong in the trust affairs of a man whose life is employed in alleging wrong-doing against his political opponents. He seeks office, therefore it is pertinent to know how he conducted affairs of a lesser character than those he would be called upon to administer if he became a minister of the crown. It is only right that the public should have their memory refreshed as to the many expedients adopted by Mr. Foster when forming the Union Trust Company, to use the funds of the Foresters in this company in speculations which the law did not permit the Foresters to indulge directly. The law wisely throws around insurance companies restrictions as to their investments, and when the law was evaded by turning the Foresters' money into the coffers of the Union

Rheumatism

I have found a tried and tested cure for Rheumatism! Not a remedy that will straighten the distorted limbs of chronic cripples, nor turn bony growths back to flesh again. That is impossible. But I can now surely kill the pains and pangs of this deplorable disease.

In Germany—with a Chemist in the City of Darmstadt—I found the last ingredient with which Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Remedy was made a perfected, dependable prescription. Without that last ingredient, I successfully treated many, many cases of Rheumatism; but now, at last, it uniformly cures all curable cases of this heretofore much dreaded disease. Those sand-like granular wastes, found in Rheumatic Blood, seem to dissolve and pass away under the action of this remedy as freely as does sugar when added to pure water. And then, when dissolved, these poisonous wastes freely pass from the system, and the cause of Rheumatism is gone forever. There is now no real need—no actual excuse to suffer longer without help. We sell, and in confidence recommend

"ALL DEALERS"

Government, or the company whose stockholders are not known to Mr. Foster, are the plainest evidence of wrong and graft, but Mr. Foster taking money from one company and using it in another for purpose of investment, forbidden by law to the former company, are innocent and proper transactions.

Must Revive His Methods.

Before Mr. Foster can establish any right to sympathy from the House upon questions of privilege such as he raised last week, he must revise his own methods of procedure. He cannot talk of the Siftonian cult, and iron bound doors and secret rooms which did not exist, and expect to get away scott free. If he is so careless or indifferent as to the sensitiveness of others who regard themselves as honorable men, he must not complain if he is repaid in his own coin. If he can imagine a wrong where no wrong exists surely it is competent for others to place a construction upon his own acts which the circumstances warrant. If he is so suspicious of others, he must allow others to entertain suspicions also, particularly when they are supported by the testimony found in the report of a Royal Commission.

A man serene in the consciousness of innocence would have said nothing, but the conclusion must be reached that Mr. Foster must have been touched upon a very sore spot when he squealed so loudly. Mr. Foster should always remember that it is wise for the man who casts the first stone to be without sin.

Heat prostrates the nerves. In the summer one needs a tonic to offset the customary hot weather Nerve and Strength depression. You will feel better within 48 hours after beginning to take such a remedy as Dr. Shoop's Restorative. Its prompt action in restoring the weakened nerves is surprising. Of course, you won't get any strength in a few days, but each day you can actually feel the improvement. That tired, lifeless, spiritless, feeling will quickly depart when using the Restorative. Dr. Shoop's Restorative will sharpen a failing appetite; it aids digestion; it will strengthen the weakened Kidneys and Heart by simply rebuilding the worn-out nerves that these organs depend upon. Test it a few days and be convinced. Sold by—ALL DEALERS.

A STORY OF HEROISM

Showing How Brave Men Can Calmly Meet Death.

WRECK OF THE BIRKENHEAD.

The Way This British Vessel Went Down Off the Cape of Good Hope. Most of the Crew Were Lost and All the Women and Children Saved.

Visitors to the hospital of the old pensioners at Chelsea will perhaps have noticed in the colonnade a simple memorial tablet, placed there by order of the late Queen Victoria to record the heroic constancy and discipline of the officers and soldiers who lost their lives in the wreck of the transport Birkenhead off the Cape of Good Hope on Feb. 26, 1852. On Jan. 7 in that year, after embarking re-enforcements amounting to fifteen officers and 476 men for the troops engaged in the Kafir war, the Birkenhead left Ireland for the cape. On board were also 166 women and children, the wives and families of soldiers. All went well till the transport reached Simon's Town, where ten officers and eighteen men were landed. The ship continued her course on the evening of Feb. 25. But the captain in his anxiety for a quick passage unfortunately kept so close to the shore that during the night the ship got among the rocks which line the coast. About three miles off Danger point at 2 o'clock in the morning of the 26th, while all except those on watch were sleeping peacefully in their hammocks, the ship struck with a violent shock. The bulk of the men on board were young soldiers.

The rush of water on the Birkenhead striking was so great that most of the soldiers on the lower troop deck were drowned in their hammocks. The remainder, with all the officers, appeared on deck, many only partly dressed, and fell in as orderly and as quietly as on the barrack square. Calling the officers round him, Lieutenant Colonel Seton of the Seventy-fourth highlanders, the senior officer on board, impressed on them the necessity for preserving order and silence among the men. The services of the next senior, Captain Wright, Ninety-first highlanders, were placed at the disposal of the commander of the ship to carry out whatever orders he might consider essential. Sixty men were put on the chain pumps on the lower after deck and told off in three reliefs. Sixty more were put on to the tackles of the paddle box boats, and the remainder were brought on to the poop to ease the fore part of the ship, as she was rolling heavily. The commander next ordered the officers' chargers to be pitched out of the gangway. The plunging and terrified horses were got up and cast over, five of them managing to swim ashore. The cutter was then got ready for the women and children, who had been collected under the poop awning, and they were passed in one by one. There being room in the boat for one or two more, the order was given for any trumpeter or bugler boys to be taken. A young drummer standing near was told by an officer to get into the boat, but, drawing himself up, exclaimed that he drew man's pay and would stick by his comrades. The cutter then shoved off in charge of one of the ship's officers, and the women and children were safe.

No sooner was she clear than the entire bow of the vessel broke off at

TIME AT THE POLES.

It is Practically Any Hour of the Day You Please.

Those who are conversant with the use of globes know that all the meridians of longitude starting from the equator converge toward and meet at the poles. They know, too, that longitude signifies time and that difference of longitude is difference in time. They know very well that when it is noon in London it is about 7 o'clock in the morning in Boston, and that when it is noon in San Francisco it is about a quarter past 3 in the afternoon in New York.

Now, as the meridian of London extends to the north pole, it necessarily ensues that when it is noon in the English capital it must also be noon at the north pole. In a similar manner when it is noon at Boston, or in San Francisco, or at Pekin, or any other place situated in the northern hemisphere, it follows that it must also be noon at the pole, because all the meridians of those places unite at the north pole. Therefore it is noon all day long at the Pole.

Thus there is an entire absence of time at the pole. But it would be just as correct to say that it is a place where there is a preponderance of time, for it is practically any time of day during the whole twenty-four hours or, indeed, through the year. In fact, a resident at the north pole could make it any time of day he might choose to select, with the consciousness that it would be the right time.

A POET'S DIET.

Byron's Strenuous Efforts to 'Keep Himself From Getting Fat.

"You mention Browning's idea that starvation was the cure for all the ills of the flesh—his own, at any rate," says a correspondent. "Browning was not the only poet with peculiar views on the subject. One of Byron's chief fears was that of becoming fat, and to avoid it he often resorted to extraordinary systems of diet. At Athens he lived mainly on rice and vinegar and water. Later he confined himself to six biscuits a day and tea. In 1816 he had so restricted his diet that he was obliged to keep down hunger by chewing mastic and tobacco. 'Don Juan' was 'written on gin and water.'"

Byron, it has been pointed out, was one of those foredoomed by their constitutions to fatness in middle life, whether they eat much or little, and his victory over nature in this respect—for he succeeded in reducing himself by these violent methods—has been quoted as one of the most remarkable achievements of the human will, considering all the circumstances. It must have been bitter to him to see such a man as Beau Brummel, who ate and drank freely and took no exercise, retaining without an effort all the elegance of figure that was his greatest gift. No wonder Byron's was the poetry of gloom.—London News.

steeped in superstition. A black fellow will on no account go near the spot where another black has been buried. He has a deep rooted aversion to one particular bird—the wagtail—because, he says, "him all day talk, talk along a white feller, tellum all about black feller," and no opportunity is lost of killing these little birds.

Many tribes "bury" their dead by sticking them up into the forks of trees and there leaving them till the flesh has either dropped or been taken, leaving the bones clean. These bones are then taken down, the larger ones buried and the smallest handed round as keepsakes to those nearly related to the deceased. Should one black fellow wish the death of a rival or enemy he points the bone at him. This means that he takes one of his late relation's bones from his dilly bag and points it, in the presence of witnesses, at the man he wishes to get rid of, all the time pouring forth threats and curses.

Strange as it may seem, the one pointed at will often languish and eventually die, perhaps in a month, perhaps in a year, for no sooner is the bone pointed than he makes up his mind to die, and there is no saving him.—London Standard.

Tennyson's Cure For Shyness.
It is recorded in "Tennyson's Life" that he used to recommend to a younger brother the thought of the stellar spaces, swarming with constellations and traversed by planets at ineffable distances, as a cure for shyness, and a lady of my acquaintance used to endeavor as a girl to stay her failing heart on the thought of eternity at such moments. It is all in vain. At the urgent moment one cares very little about the stellar motions or the dim vistas of futurity and very much indeed about the cut of one's coat and the glances of one's enemies, and the doctrines of the church and the prospects of ultimate salvation are things very light in the scales in comparison with the pressing necessities of the crisis and the desperate need to appear wholly unconcerned!—Arthur C. Benson in Putnam's Reader.

A Terrific Tumble.
Most marvelous of all the stories of great falls is the account of Charles Woolcot's terrific tumble from a height of no less than 3,000 feet. It was in Venezuela, and he was making a parachute descent. The parachute refused to open till within 100 or 200 feet from the ground. Then it spread out suddenly and split. The unfortunate man crushed both ankles and both knees, broke his right thigh and hip, dislocated his spinal column and suffered other injuries. Yet after a year in a hospital he recovered sufficiently to write an account of what was probably the most fearful accident mortal man ever survived.

Spilled Mercury.
Mercury spilled on a table or floor is somewhat hard to collect unless special precautions are taken, owing to its tendency to divide into small globules, which roll away at the slightest touch. If a wet ring is made around the spilled mercury by the aid of a wash bottle or other similar means, it will be found that the globules of mercury cannot cross the ring. The mercury can then be collected in a small shovel made from a piece of thin card or even an ordinary envelope.

Race of Life.
There wouldn't be so very much fun in living if there were not a hurdle or two to jump over in this race of life. There always have been obstacles, and there always will be, and it is of no use to repine over them.

of one of the ship's officers, and the women and children were safe.
No sooner was she clear than the entire bow of the vessel broke off at the foremast, the bowsprit going up in the air toward the foretopmast. The funnel also went over the side, carrying away the starboard paddle box and boat and crushing the men on the tackles. The paddle box boat capsized on being lowered, and the large boat in the center of the ship could not be got up.

The men were then ordered on to the poop, where they stood calmly awaiting their fate.—Within a few minutes the vessel broke in two, crosswise, just abaft the engine room, and the stern began rapidly to fill. In this extremity the commander called out, "Those who can swim jump overboard and make for the boats!" but the officers begged the soldiers not to, as the boat with the women and children would be swamped. They were young men in the prime of life, with all before them, yet no one moved, nor did any sign of terror or fear escape them. Lower and lower sank the vessel into the deadly sea. The old transport shivered, gave a final plunge and disappeared, carrying with her the band of heroes on deck and those working below at the pumps.

Men of all ages and ranks they were—the colonel and the drummer boy, officers of gentle birth and men from the workshop, the plow and the mine, but all animated with the same heroic resolution, fortitude and chivalry—as cool as though they had been on their parade ground, with as much courage as in action in the field. A few managed to cling to the rigging of the mainmast, part of which remained out of water, while others got hold of floating pieces of wood and were eventually rescued, but of fourteen officers and 458 men no fewer than nine officers and 319 men perished, many falling prey to the attacks of the sharks, which surrounded the ship in shoals, waiting for their victims. Every woman and child was saved.

Perhaps the greatest compliment ever paid to the memory of the brave was the order of the king of Prussia for the account of the wreck of the Birkenhead to be read on three successive parades at the head of every regiment in his army, and it was spoken of in every school in Prussia and Germany.—London Globe.

The Bribe That Failed.
Among Father Dempsey's steady boarders was a fellow named Delaney. He was drunk as often as he could get that way. Father Dempsey tried all manner of means to get Delaney to quit drinking. At last he said to him:

"Delaney, my man, if you'll stop drinking for six months I'll give you a check at the end of that time for $50."

"Indeed, if I stopped for six months I could write you a check for $100," answered Delaney, and Father Dempsey in telling of it later added:

"And indeed he could, too, for he's a No. 1 mechanic."

Tea Table Etiquette.
A hundred years or more ago there was a quaint tea table etiquette. It was considered a lack of courtesy to take much cream or sugar in one's tea. Etiquette demanded that the tea should be tasted from the spoon and that the hostess should then inquire, "Is your tea agreeable?" Modern women would be shocked by a fashionable lady of those days who cooled her tea with her breath, yet Young wrote of a certain bewildering Lady Betty:
Her two red lips affected zephyrs blow
To cool the Bohea and inflame the beau,
While one white finger and a thumb conspire
To lift the cup and make the world admire.

A City and Its Press.
In some respects a modern city resembles a vast commercial house. In commerce advertisement is the secret of success, and the most successful coadjutors of the municipality in the development and puffing of a capital are the newspapers. And here Berlin is lacking. Her press is on a hopelessly low level, impoverished, without enterprise, under the thumb of the authorities. In London, New York and Paris the press has a voice in the running of the city.—London Outlook.

Save Babies' Lives. For Babies and Small Children. (Made in France.)

Dr. Hennequin's Infant Tablets saved our little girl's life. Three doctors said she could not live. The Tablets cured her.—MR. E. R. McBRIDE, Napanee, Ont.

My baby was so weak from sickness that he could hardly walk. We thought he would die. We could find nothing to help him. I was given a sample package of three Hennequin Tablets; we used them; I saw a change at once. We secured the Tablets and our baby improved every day, and is now a bright, fat, good natured boy; you could not believe he was the same child. They certainly cured my baby and saved his life. I believe them to be the best medicine ever sold for babies. Mothers if your babies are not well take my advice and try these Tablets.—MRS. JAMES RIDDELL, Barrydale, Ont.

THROW AWAY LINIMENTS

Here's the Prescription to Cure Rheumatism.

Liniments only reach the skin and the muscles directly under the skin. Now, liniments can't cure Rheumatism. They simply deaden the nerves for a time. When the effect wears away, the pain returns worse than ever.

If the bowels do not move regularly—if the kidneys are strained or weak—if the skin is dry or harsh—the blood is sure to be filled with impurities or urea. This urea is changed into uric acid which is the poison that causes rheumatism.

Now, the only possible way to cure Rheumatism is to prevent uric acid from being formed. Logically, the only way to do this is to keep kidneys, bowels and skin in good working order, and prevent the stomach from being too acid. And the only way to do this is to take "Fruit-a-tives."

These marvelous tablets of fruit juices and tonics act directly on the three great eliminating organs—bowels, kidneys and skin—and put them in perfect condition. That is the only secret of their great success in curing rheumatism, sciatica and lumbago.

THE DUCKING STOOL.

How a "Scold" Used to Be Punished in Old England.

It is interesting to conjure up a picture of a "ducking" as practiced in England at the end of the eighteenth century.

When the "scold" had been properly tried and convicted, she was escorted by a crowd of her neighbors—in fact, by the whole village—to the nearest pond, and the greener and slimmer the pond the better. A long plank was produced, at one end of which was the ducking stool, and in this the screaming, struggling victim was securely pinned.

The chair end of the plank was then pushed far over the edge of the pond, and at a signal it was tilted deep into the green ooze until the scold was completely immersed.

When the dripping, half drowned woman was raised to the surface again to the jeers and laughter of the on-lookers it can be imagined that her tongue wagged to some purpose. After a second dose she emerged more subdued, and after a third or fourth she was as penitent a woman as the village contained and was allowed to proceed home a sadder and wiser woman until the next time.—London Tit-Bits.

DEFIED THE JUDGE.

A Fine For Voting That Susan B. Anthony Never Paid.

"It has been so many years ago that most people have forgotten that the late Susan B. Anthony was fined $100 or a year's imprisonment for having dared to vote for General Grant for president," said a Chicago judge.

"Miss Anthony was as brave as she was intellectual and asked to be allowed to speak a word in her own behalf. Permission being given, she told the court of the struggle she had in keeping a little newspaper going from which she made her living. 'Your honor,' she said, holding up her right hand, 'I am due my creditors not less than $1,000. This money I expect to live to pay, but I am willing this arm shall wither from my body before I pay' the $100 you have so unjustly assessed against me."

"The court realized the deep seriousness of Miss Anthony's declaration, and though she could have been ordered to jail for nonpayment of the fine his honor did not have the nerve to enforce the extreme penalty. Miss Anthony lived for many years after its imposition, but the fine was never paid."

Cobra's Fatal Bite.

One of the deadliest snakes in India is the cobra, which claims hundreds of victims every year. An English official once saw one bite a fowl, and, being curious to learn how long the venom took to act, he timed it with his watch. The moment the cock was touched it screamed, but at once ran off to its mates and began picking as if nothing were wrong. In thirty seconds the comb and wattles changed from red to black. In two minutes it began to stagger and fell down in convulsions, struggling violently until it died, three minutes and a half after it had been bitten. On plucking the fowl a wound not bigger than a pin prick was found at the extreme end of the wing. Round this spot the color was very dark, but the rest of the bird's body, excepting comb and wattles, was of a natural color.

A Bath a Month.

Apparently the people of Persia are not great believers in the old maxim "Cleanliness is next to godliness," for baths are only taken once a month by the people, when they go to the public baths and make amends, so to speak, for the infrequency of their ablutions by spending a whole day getting cleaned and trimmed. At the baths they are washed, shaved, dye their hair and nails, get shampooed and spend the rest of the day eating buns and drinking sherbet. There are fixed days for men and women, and on bath days a man goes about the streets shouting "Hamum!" ("Bath day!"). After the bath the ladies have their hair plaited in a number of thin plaits, which are not opened and combed out until the next bath day comes round.

Thought Only of the Dynamite.

Some grim stories are told of Lord Kitchener, says the United States Gazette, and we have read one which, although we cannot vouch for the truth of it, has a decided Kitchener flavor about it. A young subaltern who was in charge of some works that were in course of construction in the Punjab had the misfortune to lose some native workmen through an accident with dynamite. Fearful of a reprimand from headquarters, he telegraphed to the commander in chief, "Regret to report killing of twelve laborers by dynamite accident." Back is said to have come the laconic message, "Do you want any more dynamite?"

ARTISTS' BLUNDERS.

A Procession of Monks That Adam and Eve Enjoyed.

Among the most amusing "breaks" by artists is a landscape by Turner in which a rainbow is depicted behind the sun. This occasioned almost as much humorous comment in English art circles as did the slip of Constant, the great French artist, who in his portrait of Queen Victoria painted the ribbon of the Order of the Garter the wrong color.

A picture of Adam and Eve in the garden of Eden hung in the gallery of the Gesu, in Lisbon, represents the first couple as watching a procession of monks.

In the famous galleries at Antwerp are certain pictures of old masters in which the jumble of ideas is as remarkable as the technique is fine. In one picture of heaven the archangels are armed with bows and arrows, and in a celebrated painting of "The Murder of the Innocents" the massacre is represented as taking place in a city of Holland. The parents of the children are stout burghers, the Roman soldiers are Dutch policemen armed with muskets, and the innocent infants are transformed into solid schoolboys in bulgy woolen trousers and jackets and hobnailed shoes.

CULTURE OF HAIR

THE EVANS VACUUM CAP is a practical invention constructed on scientific and hygienic principles by the simple means of which a free and normal circulation is restored throughout the scalp. The minute blood vessels are gently stimulated to activity, thus allowing the food supply which can only be derived from the blood, to be carried to the hair roots, the effects of which are quickly seen in a healthy, vigorous growth of hair. There is no rubbing, and as no drugs or chemicals of whatsoever kind are employed there is nothing to cause irritation. It is only necessary to wear the Cap three or four minutes daily.

60 DAYS' FREE TRIAL!

The Company's Guarantee.

AN EVANS VACUUM CAP will be sent you for sixty days' free trial. If you do not see a gradual development of a new growth of hair, and are not convinced that the Cap will completely restore your hair, you are at liberty to return the Cap with no expense whatever to yourself. It is requested, as an evidence of good faith, that the price of the Cap be deposited with the Chancery Lane Safe Deposit Company of London, the largest financial and business institution of the kind in the world, who will issue a receipt guaranteeing that the money will be returned in full, on demand without question or comment, at any time during the trial period.

The eminent Dr. L. N. LOVE, in his address to the Medical Board on the subject of Alopecia areata, stated that if a means could be devised to bring nutrition to the hair follicles, that without resorting to any irritating process, the problem of hair growth would be solved. Later on, when the EVANS VACUUM CAP was submitted to him for inspection, he remarked that the Cap would fulfil and confirm in practice the observations he had previously made before the Medical Board.

Dr. W. MOORE, referring to the invention, says that the principle upon which the Evans Vacuum Cap is founded is absolutely correct and indisputable.

An illustrated and descriptive book of the Evans Vacuum Cap will be sent, post free, on application.

Prosperous Young Actor (returning tired after a matinee and evening performance of successful play)—Ah, dear boys, I really think it's time all good actors were in bed. Grumpy Tragedian (looking up from his paper)—They are.—Life.

Unexpected.

"Why, Clara," said a mother to her little daughter, who was crying, "what are you crying about?"

"'Cause," sobbed the little miss, "I started to make dolly a b-bonnet, and it c-c-came out b-bloomers."

Potential Incentive.

HELPFUL ADVICE

You won't tell your family doctor the whole story about your private illness—you are too modest. You need not be afraid to tell Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass., the things you could not explain to the doctor. Your letter will be held in the strictest confidence. From her vast correspondence with sick women during the past thirty years she may have gained the very knowledge that will help your case. Such letters as the following, from grateful women, establish beyond a doubt the power of to conquer all female diseases.

Mrs. Frank Emsley, Lindsay, Ontario, writes to Mrs. Pinkham:

"When I wrote to you some time ago, I was a very sick woman suffering from female troubles. I had inflammation of the feminine organs and could not stand or walk any distance. At last I was confined to my bed and the doctor said I would have to go through an operation, but this I refused to do.

"A friend advised Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. After using three bottles of it, I feel like a new woman.

"I most heartily recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to all women who suffer with female troubles."

FACTS FOR SICK WOMEN.

For thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has positively cured thousands of women who have been troubled with displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing-down feeling, flatulency, indigestion, dizziness, or nervous prostration.

Many years ago an archbishop of Bordeaux attested the case of a young ecclesiastic who was in the habit of getting up during the night in a state of somnambulism and, taking pen, ink and paper, composing and writing his sermons. When he finished one page he would read and correct it. In order to ascertain whether the somnambulist made use of his eyes the archbishop held a piece of pasteboard under his chin to prevent his seeing the paper upon which he was writing, but he continued to write on without being in the least inconvenienced.

It is related of Negretti, a sleepwalker, that he would sometimes carry a lighted candle, as if to give him light in his employment, but on a bottle being substituted he took it and carried it without apparently noticing the difference.

Another somnambulist would dress in his sleep and go to the cellar, where it was pitch dark, and draw wine from the cask without walking into anything and without spilling a drop of the wine, but if he happened to awake in the cellar he had great difficulty in groping his way out.—Exchange.

Another Kind.

When Johnny Hobbs left his home up among the New Hampshire hills to visit his grandmother in Worcester, Mass., he was cautioned by his mother that he would find things in the city strangely different from those at home.

Johnny arrived in the early afternoon, and long before tea time his grandmother, who lived most simply, told him to run out to the pantry and get a bowl of milk which she had left there "for a hungry boy."

A moment later she followed him and, to her amazement, beheld her grandson bravely at work on a bowl of spearmint tea which she had forgetfully put in the place where she had told him to find the milk.

"Why, child," she cried, seizing the bowl from poor Johnny, "don't you know this isn't milk?"

"I—I knew it wasn't like Hillbury milk," stammered Johnny, with a final gulp, "but I thought maybe it was the kind folks had in Worcester."

A Musical Spider.

The extraordinary musical sensitiveness of spiders has several times been proved. Every one has heard of Pellisson's spider. Consoler of the unfortunate prisoner, it perished because it listened too closely to the captive's violin. The jailer saw it and crushed it brutally. Gretry, the composer, speaks of a favorite spider which descended along its thread upon his piano as soon as he played it. When giving recitals at Brussels Rubinstein saw a large spider issue from the floor of the platform and listen to the music. He gave three concerts at the same hall, and on each occasion the spider appeared.

Expressive.

One morning when little Edna's mamma came down to breakfast she was so hoarse she could scarcely speak.

"Oh, mamma," cried Edna, "what a sore voice you've got!"

Extremely Prosperous.

Mrs. Brown—Is your husband's business growing? Mrs. Smith—Oh, dear, yes! Why last week his receipts were so large that he had to have a receiver appointed to take care of them!

No grand doer in this world can be a copious speaker about his doings.—Carlyle.

MARYSVILLE.

Mr. and Mrs. Byron, J. Scanlon, left on Monday last for their home at Moor Lake.

Mr. and Mrs. Michael McAlpin are rejoicing over the arrival of a little daughter.

Mr. and Mrs. Mathew Sexsmith, of Kingston, spent Thursday with their daughter, Mrs. John Russell.

Miss Annie Hanley, of Read, called on friends in this village on Thursday.

Miss Amy Sexsmith is at the Marysville house.

John and Francis Meagher attended the Scanlon-Meagher reception at the home of James Scanlon, Enterprise, on Friday evening last.

Mrs. John Haddigan and daughter, Nellie, are spending a few days with Mrs. James Brickley.

Miss Amy Tangon is visiting her sister, Mrs. M. McAlpin.

School has closed and many of the children are at Deseronto trying their examinations.

CENTREVILLE

A very pretty wedding took place on Wednesday morning, of last week at ten o'clock, in St. Anthony's church, Centreville, when Miss Marguerite G. McGuire, of Strathcona, and Michael Lawlor, of Centreville, were united in matrimony. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Fr. McCarthy. The bride, who is one of Strathcona's popular young ladies, was attired in a gown of white silk, with trimmings of white chiffon and lace, and wore a large white picture hat, also the groom's gift, a beautiful gold bracelet, set with pearls and sapphires. The wedding march was played by Mrs. W. B. Dunn, sister of the bride. A large number of immediate relatives were present. The bride was attended by Miss McDonald, of Bath, while J. Drumm, Belleville, performed the duties of best man. The groom's gift to the bride was a solid upholstered oak chair, to the bridesmaid a gold brooch set with emeralds, to the groomsmen a set of cuff links. The bride received many useful presents. Mr. and Mrs. Lawlor left for Cobourg, Toronto and other place amid showers of rice and good wishes of their many friends. The bride was dressed in a travelling suit of Copenhagen blue, with hat to match. On their return they will take up housekeeping in Mr. Lawlor's cosy home at Centreville.

LAPUM.

Mrs. Wesley Parrott, of Wilton, accompanied by her niece, Mrs. Hope, of St. Paul, Minn., were on Thursday guests of Mrs. Henry Bush and Mrs. F. E. Brown.

Clarence Boulton has sold his fine roadster to John Burgoyne, Camden East, and realized a good price.

Mr. and Mrs. Levi Brown and Miss Jessie Huff attended the circus on Thursday last in Napanee.

Miss Florence Joyner, has returned from visiting friends in Colebrook.

James Huff had one of his cows fearfully cut by getting in a barbed wire fence.

Miss Jessie Huff and brother, Clifford, spent Sunday with their brother, Harold Huff.

William Brown was removed to the general hospital, Kingston, on Thursday, suffering with typhoid fever.

Mr. and Mrs. S. Vandewater, Echo Lake, spent a few days here last week with friends.

Mr. and Mrs. James Huff and son, Frederick, spent Sunday at Michael Love's.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Hamm, Napanee, spent Sunday here with Mr. Hamm's mother, Mrs. T. B. Hamm.

CHRONIC CATARRH NOSE AND THROAT

"At the Advice of Friends I Tried
Peruna and the Results Have Been Highly Satisfactory."—So Writes
Mr. Pilon.

MR. RAOUL PILON, 116 Rue Notre Dame, Lachine, P. Q., Can., writes:
"I write you a few words to express to you my satisfaction at being cured. I was afflicted with catarrh of the throat and nose and suffered much. I was greatly discouraged. I had a bad breath and a bad taste in my mouth in the morning."

"I took treatment for some time without obtaining relief. At the advice of friends I tried the Peruna and the results have been highly satisfactory. At the end of four months I was completely cured."

Neglected catarrh becomes chronic. Having developed into the chronic stage, a longer and more persistent treatment will be required to cure it than if the disease were treated at the onset.

However, Peruna generally brings relief, whether the catarrh is acute or chronic. If you are wise you will keep Peruna on hand and take a few doses at the first appearance of a cold or cough, and thus perhaps save yourself both suffering and expense.

Peruna is recognized the world over as a standard remedy for catarrh. A multitude of people have been benefited by it.

THE NORMAN FARMER.

He Carries His Top Soil With Him
When He Moves.

The modern farmer was applying electrical massage to a cart horse's sprained knee. During the intervals of rest he talked farm talk.

"There are tenants," he said, "who, when they move, carry their farms with them as the tortoise does his house. These people are the Norman French, the world's best farmers. Where you or I would require twenty or thirty acres of land to keep one family, the French farmer will keep his family on a quarter of an acre. If he chose to cultivate twenty or thirty acres he would become a millionaire. His secret lies in the perfection to which he brings his top soil. What with fertilizing and watering and clearing, his top soil is the blackest, finest, richest soil on earth. His top soil is to the French farmer what her voice is to a prima donna. And when he rents he contracts that on the termination of his lease he may carry off eighteen inches of the top soil with him."

"When you see a French farmer mov-

An American Admirer.

In a small way an American figures in the journal kept by Rosalie Lamorliere during the revolutionary days of 1793 in France and published under the title, "The Last Days of Marie Antoinette."

Rosalie Lamorliere, a girl of Picardy, was servant to the queen in the conciergerie. "One day," Rosalie has recorded, "M. de Saint Leger, the American, who was coming from the register's office, noticed that I was carrying a glass half filled with water."

"Did the queen drink the water that has gone from the glass?" he asked.

"I answered that she did."

"With a quick gesture he uncovered his head and drank the water that remained with every indication of respect and pleasure."

A Rapid Rhymer.

In illustration of the working powers of George R. Sims, the dramatist and poet, it is said that one night a new piece was produced at a leading theater in London. Sims sat it out and then returned to his office, where he wrote a column and a half of criticism in rhyme. It was near the time for the paper to go to press when he began, and the boy took the piece verse by verse from him to the composing room, the boy walking continuously from one to the other for an hour.

A Hint to the Old Man.

THE MODERN HAT.

Its Serious Defects From the Hygienic Point of View.

The size, the style and incidentally the cost of women's hats, says a writer in the Berliner Umschau, have taken up so much of the time of the people who make hats a study that they have not had a moment to devote to the head covering of the sterner sex. Considered from the hygienic point of view, little fault can be found with the hats of our sisters, although some of them, when viewed through the glass of reason, are unthinkable. But men's hats are faulty from the physician's point of view, and a wider knowledge of the defects of the modern hat would add to the already large army of bare-headed men. In order to demonstrate which hats should be avoided a perfectly healthy man was placed where the rays of the sun could strike him directly. He wore while taking the sun bath various kinds of hats for a period of fifteen minutes each. Every hat contained in the crown a thermometer, and these recorded as follows: The one in the panama hat 77 degrees, the straw sailor 81, the silk hat 89, the felt hat 95 and the black hat and yachting cap 99 and 100 degrees respectively.

Sailing Clubs.

The first sailing club was probably the Cork Harbor Water club, now known as the Royal Cork Yacht club, established in the year 1720. The vessels were small, and from that period until early in the nineteenth century yachting developed but slowly. In 1812 the Cowes Yacht club was founded with some fifty-five yachtsmen. Since that date yachting associations have rapidly grown in numbers and strength all over Europe and America.

MAKE SUMMER WORK LIGHT

*How Much Time It Takes Every Day
Just to Dust Ornaments*

A FEW years ago some one remarked that Americans dress in summer as though they lived in a cool climate, when, in reality, their country is a tropical land from June to September.

The statement is a trifle exaggerated, but it is a fact that not until within a comparatively short time have our men conformed to the climate to a degree permitting them to use any warmer where the mercury may be standing. Your room need not look bare. Keep out one or two or three articles worth resting the eyes upon and seek repose in empty spaces, where the other ornaments used to be. A well-arranged vase of flowers does more to beautify the room in these summer days than all the pieces of china and brass you can pile up.

*"I Would Pack
Away Those

Your room will look better still and your work be made yet lighter if you take up heavy woolen rugs, which catch the dust and require time and strength to keep clean in the dusty season. If your floors are good enough to show bare, or to protect in the most trodden places with the mats of woven grasses, which come in cheap and attractive designs, try these for the warm period. Better still, if you could afford it, because easier to take care of, would be a matting over the entire floor. This is more readily kept clean than a bare floor with rugs, and has a cool effect which is very restful.

So much for your parlor or sitting room. In the dining room there are other changes which will make life easier. I have spoken of the silver and brasses. If you have large pieces of these, put them away until it turns cooler. I know they are very ornamental and the pride of your heart, but, granting this, you will have to own that they add very much to your work. They must be bright and shining or they are a reproach to the housekeeper. You feel that, and many a hot day, when you ought to be resting or out of doors getting some good of the air, you are doubling yourself up polishing those blessed brasses or that cherished silver. So put it away until cooler weather. Give the silver a good rubbing, wrap it in tissue paper and put a bit of camphor with it and send it to the bank or some other place where it will be off your mind and your hands. If some of the pieces are dishes or pitchers or other articles you use constantly, discard them none the less and buy the cheap pressed glass to take their place, if you have nothing in the house that you can use. Such glass comes in good shapes, and you need not mind having it on your table, especially when you recollect that it is making your work lighter. Small silver, of course, you have to use, but the large pieces are only a luxury, after all, and no more real use than those brasses which give you so much pride and so

The bedrooms may be swept clear of dirty unnecessary articles which catch the dust and add to your work. The fine frilled covers you adorn your bureau them

What else can be eliminated? Well, if it were my house, I would pack away those woolen table covers and put pretty wash covers on the tables in their place. They will look cooler and make you feel more comfortable. Next, I would banish nearly all that bric-a-brac and do away with one big pile of dusting which has to be accomplished daily in all weath-

Cut tripe and potatoes into inch cubes. Boil the tripe an hour; put in the potatoes, and cook until they are done. Serve with buttered bread and coffee. If you have stock in which to boil the tripe, or if you wish to add beef or veal, you may; but it is good without. them well away! By this I mean that it is little good to stick them up on another shelf only a little more remote than the one they occupied before, where they will still catch dust and be a burden on your mind. Lock them in a trunk or in a closet out of your sight. When you take them out in the fall you will find an air of novelty about your old possessions, and you will feel as though you had a Christmas or a birthday or a wedding celebration all over again.

When you have lightened your work in this fashion, do not, I beg of you, look upon the time you have saved as just so much more leisure in which to do something else in the line of useful occupation. Don't think that now you will have a chance to get ahead with the fall sewing, or catch up on this or that piece of work which fell behind last winter. Instead of that, resolve to get a little rest and to devote yourself to the study of repose as a fine art—repose for yourself, not for some one else!

Do the things you think you never have time to do. Read a magazine in the morning in the hour you usually give to dusting the bric-a-brac or cleaning the silver. Take a walk in the afternoon and lie in the hammock in the evening. Recollect all the time that you have made your work lighter and have just so much more leisure to the good, all your own to spend exactly as you please. There is a cessation of many duties that press upon you in the cold weather. Don't fill up that space and the other you have won for yourself by the drastic measures I have recommended with any task you feel you must do. Give your conscience and your spinal column both a rest, and depend upon it that you will do better

THE S. S. LESSON

INTERNATIONAL LESSON, JULY 5.

Lesson I. Israel. Asks for a King.
Golden Text, Prov. 8. 15.

THE LESSON WORD STUDIES.

(Based on the text of the Revised Version).

Introductory.—We resume our study of the Old Testament at the point in the history of Israel where we discontinued it six months ago. The twelve tribes have entered the land of Canaan, and for a period roughly estimated at from two to four hundred years have been under the rule of Judges who governed in different parts of the country with varying degrees of strength and faithfulness to the people's welfare. Samuel was the last of these Judges, and a survey of his early life as helper in the tabernacle and of his later years as ruler in Ramah (I. Sam. 7. 17), dispensing justice throughout the country (I. Sam. 7. 16), performing the functions of priest on behalf of the people (I. Sam. 7. 9), and standing as the prophet of Jehovah brings us to the time of our study for this. Quarter which includes the remainder of Samuel's life and the establishment and early years of the monarchy in Israel. The materials for this study are to be found in the first and second books of Samuel which were originally one. The books received their name from Samuel, not as an indication that he wrote them, but because he is the central figure throughout much of the period which they cover. Their author is unknown, but it is generally thought that he included in his work several very old accounts dating back to David's reign and, perhaps, even earlier contemporary prophetic records and oral traditions. If this be so, the rather broken narrative and the repetition of stories differing in their details are easily understood. A knowledge of this period of transition from the loose tribal life of the confederacy to the centralized national life of the kingdom is indispensable to an understanding of Israel's history and the reading of some history of Israel, such as that by Wade or by Otley, and of the articles "Judges, Period of," "Samuel," and other appropriate ones in Hastings' Dictionary of the Bible, is recommended to anyone who wishes to make a more thorough study of this period.

Verse 10. All the words of Jehovah—Which he received in private consultation with him.

Unto the people—That is, to the "Elders of Israel" who brought the people's request, and were an official representative body of much importance.

That asked of him a king—For the ostensible reason see the first part of verse 5 and for the real reason the latter part of the same verse (read verses 1 to 9).

11. The manner of the king—The "custom" or "law" (compare 2 Kings 17. 26). There is some ambiguity as to Samuel's attitude here. According to 1 Sam. 8. 9, this is a solemn protest and warning to the people against the despotism which the king will exercise; elsewhere it appears to be simply an explanation of what was necessarily involved in Israel's demand given them so that they might not choose blindly, while in 1 Sam. 10. 25, it is said, "Samuel told the people the manner of the kingdom, and wrote it in the book, and laid it up before Jehovah," thereby giving it his sanction and setting apart these customs as the constitutional right of the monarch. Perhaps his acquiescence was given reluctantly when he saw the determination of the people and in the interests of order he himself helped formulate the "manner of the kingdom." In any event, it is clear that, as a whole, the attitude of Samuel, both personally and as the representacracker crumbs, then fried, is good for supper.

Cleaning Clothes.

My husband gets his clothes very dirty. I clean them myself, and save quite a good bit in a year.

Brush well, turning all the pockets. Make a good suds of strong soap and water, to which a tablespoonful of ammonia is added. Put the trousers into this and souse them up and down. Then, laying them on a board, scrub them well with a stout (fiber) scrubbing brush. Rinse in two or three waters if they are very dirty. The first water should be of soap and ammonia suds.

Sponge the coat and vest faithfully with suds and ammonia.

Your irons should be very hot and as heavy as you can get them. Cover the garments with a damp cloth and press hard, using all the strength you can muster. Put a rolling-pin under the top of the sleeves where they are padded. When the trousers are dry, lay the seams together and press through a damp cloth with a hot iron. When it has been pressed, hang the suit up to dry where it is warm, drying the coat on a hanger to keep the shape of the shoulders.

Overalls need no rubbing, and white ones will be of a good color, if put over the fire in a pall of cold water. First, shred soap into a sauceman of water and boil until dissolved. And a tablespoonful of ammonia, and pour over the clothes. Keep pounding the clothes with a heavy stick as they boil. Do this in two soapy and one clear waters, and rinse once. The pounding (or poking) is important.

I used to faint two or three times in doing my washing for the week, but by doing it in this way I have no trouble, and am only moderately tired.

Put warm water in the tub—not too much. Wash first the tablecloths, then the bedclothes. Another water for towels and rough pieces, and, last of all, fine underwear. Rinse in a pail of warm water, changing often, and blue. The warm water takes all the soap out and makes them white, without boiling, if the water be changed often enough. By doing the heavy pieces first, while one is fresh, if one is too tired to undertake the fine articles they may be quickly done next day. After awhile the whole wash may be done in a couple of hours.

A Baby Basket.

Lastly! An inexpensive baby basket may be made of a wire dish drainer, that costs but 10 cents. Fit a piece of cardboard in the bottom, covering as for a workbasket, using white lawn, over pink or blue, and covering the back with a piece of long cloth.

I'm afraid I have said too much, but these things have helped me so much that I wanted to pass them on.

(Mrs.) A. B. (Philadelphia.)

A theologian defined inspiration somewhat in this fashion: "What inspires me is inspired." Without stopping to consider the soundness or the fallacy of the "catchy" epigram, we may safely assert that, in nine times out of ten, what is helpful to one housemother will be useful to somebody else. Hence, it becomes a duty "to pass it on."

I am glad to get a trustworthy recipe at last for "Philadelphia peppercorn." But where does the pepper come in? Is it a Quaker figure of speech?

Cost of Family Meals

I did not see your "Family Meals for a Week" when you began the series, so do not know for what you claim the menu may be carried out per week. I saw, however, your answer to a query in which you asserted it might be done by people of moderate means. I have a family of three adults and two children. I should be glad to know what you consider would be the amount for such a family. I may say that I have very little at my disposal for household expenses and living is very high here.

B. M. H. (Ontario.)

I wish I could answer your question categorically; but, as you say, prices are high in your locality, as they are in mine. I was talking a day or two ago with a housewife whose family is exactly the same as yours—three adults and two children. She is a judicious manager, but she lamented to me that she could not set her table according to my menus on less than $15 per week. I told her frankly that she is doing well if she can do it on that at the present prices of food.

I say to you as I did to her, that each caterer for her own family group must make selections and omissions to suit taste and means. I try to present a fair and reasonable variety for everyday living. I do not think the menus extravagant. If we offer roast or broiled chicken one day, look out for cheaper dishes for a few days thereafter. If expensive desserts fall into Saturday and Wednesday, the intervening sweets are frugal. And I keep a diligent eye upon "left-overs."

Ginger Snaps

One cup of molasses boiled five minutes, one-half cup of shortening, one slightly rounded teaspoonful of soda; one cup of flour, one-half cup of sugar, one spoonful of salt; flour to handle easily. Roll very thin and bake quickly.

M. G. S. (Chicago.)

I take this time and place to say to the donor of the foregoing simple and good recipe that, falling her address in full and the stamped and self-addressed envelope which never reached my hands if it were sent, I cannot answer by mail her inquiry as to the business solvency and trustworthiness of "D. D.," whose name she enclosed. I wish I could be of service to "M. G. S." for her letter has enlisted my hearty sympathy.

he saw the determination of the people and in the interests of order he himself helped formulate the "manner of the kingdom." In any event, it is clear that, as a whole, the attitude of Samuel, both personally and as the representative of Jehovah, was unfriendly to the proposal of the elders and the people.

He will take—All service from the most honorable to the most menial was to be compulsory. The price of the king's luxury was the people's personal liberty.

For his chariots, and to be his horsemen—Either as grooms and drivers in the king's personal retinue, or his officers in the imperial troops. Probably the latter, in view of Solomon's custom of taking Israelites for the higher places in his service and foreigners for the lower ones (1 Kings 9. 22). The idea of chariots and horses was always hateful to the prophets and associated with regal pomp and independence of Jehovah (Hos. 14. 3).

They shall run before his chariots—Runners were used by Oriental kings as a personal bodyguard, as heralds who preceded the royal train, and as messengers in peace and war.

12. Captains of thousands . . . fifties—Local officers in the military organizations of the country. The divisions were roughly made according to numbers, but soon became territorial, so that a district was a "thousand," a smaller one an "hundred," and so on.

His ground—The royal lands, which would be very extensive and fertile.

To make his . . . chariots—Royal armorer and blacksmiths. To men who are used to agriculture and herding these occupations were all unproductive and to Israelites they indicated a disloyalty to Jehovah.

13. Daughters—The need of their services was especially unreasonable because occasioned by the whim of the king who could well have employed men for all of these duties.

Perfumers—Compounders of spices and ointments, the use of which at this time was looked upon as an effeminate luxury.

14. To his servants—Court favorites who were especially hateful because for the most part they were foreigners. They had no interests in common with the people of the land.

15. The tenth—The more formal levy for defraying the great expenses of the king's household.

Officers—Chamberlains.

16. Young men—One of the earliest manuscripts reads "herds" instead. This would seem to be the more probable reading as "men-servants" have already been mentioned.

17. And ye shall be his servants—The summing up. The royal aggression having touched all their property and families reaches their own person. The end is slavery.

19. Nay—Notwithstanding all the good reasons to the contrary. They had already made up their minds.

20. That we also may be like—Israel's sinful habit of copying her heathen neighbors was early developed.

All the nations—Not only the great ones such as Egypt and Assyria, but the adjoining Canaanite tribes whose contaminating influence was even more dangerous.

That our king may judge us . . . battles—The threefold functions of the eastern ruler—(1) to administer internal affairs, (2) to represent the people on public occasions, (3) to be the leader in time of war. Samuel had done all three but not with the ostentation and display which they desired.

21. He rehearsed them in the ears of Jehovah—Notice the striking simplicity of the Hebrew thought and language. All of Samuel's dealings with the people and his relations with God are told in the quaint terms of talking and listening.

22. Go ye every man unto his city—This was a set form for dismissing a council or assembly.

NOT THERE.

Counsel—"Well, what was done in the interim?"

Witness—"I don't know, sir, I didn't go into the interim. I stayed in the ante-room."

KINSHIP WITH ROYALTY

YOU MAY BE VERY IMPORTANT WITHOUT KNOWING IT.

Many People are Related to Royalty Who are Not Aware of the Fact.

A Duke of Norfolk once, inspired by a generous fit, announced his intention of entertaining to dinner all the Howards in existence who were related to him—the Duke, of course, being the head of the Howard family. He set agents to work to seek out his relations; but had to abandon his proposed "little party," when he was assured that something like 20,000 people would have a right to come to it, says Pearson's Weekly.

In the same way, an astonishing number of people might be able to claim kinship, not with mere dukes, but with royalty, if they only knew all about themselves. The heirs of monarchs who have died on their thrones are comparatively easy to trace, and are, roughly speaking, fairly well known.

In this way, for instance, it was no secret that the late Sir William Harcourt was descended from the Plantagenet kings, and several gentlemen who bear no other legal designation than plain "Mr." are known to have royal blood in their veins.

This does not apply to kings who have lost their thrones. King Harold, the last Saxon sovereign of England, was the son of Earl Godwin. When he was slain at the battle of Hastings he undoubtedly left children behind him. Some of them fled abroad, to escape from William the Conqueror, but others remained in the country, where they sank into poverty and obscurity; but they married and had children. There is at least a chance, therefore, that everyone named Godwin or Goodwin is related to a royal family.

A KING IN PRISON FOR DEBT.

King Richard III., whom we all know so well as the wicked Duke of Gloucester, is popularly believed to have been childless when he fell at Bosworth, but some historians hold that there is plausible evidence that he left a son. This son, to escape the death or captivity to which he would have been doomed by the victorious Henry VII. had he been captured, is said to have taken a common name and retired into Somersetshire, where he died as a petty farmer.

The whole story may be a myth; but there is nothing impossible about it, and the descendants of King Richard's nameless son may be numbered amongst ordinary working folk.

All the Clarks have a right, if they like, to think that they may be connected with royalty—albeit, royalty of a somewhat dubious sort. When Dr. Samuel Johnson was doing so much to make Fleet Street famous, there was alive in Europe, an adventurer who called himself the Baron Theodore Stephen de Neuhoft. He found his way to Corsica, and assisted the Corsicans to get free from the Republic of Genoa, which was ruling the island in a tyrannical manner. In return, they proclaimed him King under the title of Theodoros I.

His royalty was brief, however. He had frequent quarrels with the Corsicans, and finally quitted the island. Ultimately he drifted to London, where he kept up a sort of shabby-genteel regal style. But at last he was arrested for debt, and remained in prison for sixteen years. When released he was broken-down and old, and died in the house of a poor tailor.

IRELAND'S MANY MONARCHS.

The King of Corsica had a granddaughter, who married an official in the Custom House, named Clarke. The family became very poor, and all genuine traces of them have been lost. But it is open to any Clarke who pleases to imagine that he is a descendant of the dashing, unlucky Theodore.

A lot of people have claims to belong to a much more distinguished family. Kindly folk still in the land of the living have employed a meek old charwoman, who called herself Miss Paley, and was glad to earn a shilling in odd ways. Nothing concerning her ancestry could be definitely proved; but there was reason for believing that she was a descendant of Constantine Paleologus, the last Greek Emperor of Constantinople.

Constantine was killed when the Turks captured his capital in 1453; and his family and relations had to flee for their lives. Some of them came to England, and there are living thousands of his descendants.

There is a general impression that the old royal family of Stuart is extinct. This, however, is a mistake. Stuarts and Stewarts scattered all over Britain can claim kinship with the old royal family.

In ancient days there used to be about a dozen kings reign in Ireland at once—the King of Derry, of Munster, of Connaught, and so on. They are all gone now, but so many of their descendants are alive that practically every Irishman has a right to fancy himself related to royalty if he wants to.

AUSTRALIAN MAN HUNT

THE HUMAN BLOODHOUNDS OF QUEENSLAND.

About the Wonderful Antipodean Tracker, and the Way He Does His Work.

A criminal in Australia knows that his chances for escape are nearly hopeless if a "tracker" is put upon his trail within a day after the crime is discovered. A "tracker" is a native black man having a natural instinct for running down criminals fleeing from justice. These men are veritable bloodhounds, and their strange power is possessed by no other race in the world.

So implicit is the confidence felt in them by the police that when a black starts out upon a man-hunt the officer who goes with him merely follows in his wake. He does not question him, or in any way interfere with him, but, leading his own horse, allows the guide to go in whatever direction he pleases, no matter how apparently reasonless his course may seem.

The most successful trackers are in Queensland, near the edge of New South Wales. They will travel any distance, animated by no feeling of hatred for their quarry, but only desirous of proving their expertness. The reward they ask is absurdly small for the long and difficult trails. A dollar or two or some cheap bracelets, rings, and so on, quite satisfies them. They have no idea of the value of money. Rum is their great weakness.

PAID WITH A BOTTLE OF RUM.

Once a tracker was employed to locate some valuable trees for a timber man. He had to travel some forty miles through a forest so dense that it was necessary to cut his way through with his tomahawk. All he asked for was a bottle of rum, while the timber merchant derived over $10,000 from the sale of the trees.

The following description of a man-hunt will convey a clear idea of the dangers and hardships to be endured.

In this particular case the tracker was a splendid specimen of manhood. The usual loon garment of kangaroo-skin he had exchanged for a light covering of cotton cloth provided by the police. He led a horse, so as to make time in the open country districts where the runaway's footsteps could be seen from a horse. The hunt was very earnest, because the fugitive had stolen some cattle. In Australia the crime of cattle-stealing is most severely dealt with, and considered a serious offence.

The offender was a well-seasoned bushman, cunning and acquainted with the tactics of the "trackers"; furthermore, he had two days' start of his pursuers.

BARK BEDS.

To accompany a chase like this is awesome; the utter silence and desolation of the woods is so depressing. Then, too, the trails are deceptive, often leading to a deserted wood camp beneath a foliage so dense that it is impossible even to catch a glimpse of the sky. Darkness closes in very quickly in the mountain regions, and by nightfall the "tracker" and his employer were glad to reach an "accommodation house" (or rancher's home), where such as these were usually welcomed and allowed to put up for the night. At this house the officer tried to hear tidings of his man, but no one had seen him.

All the next day the black fellow led along as swiftly as possible. The way was extremely rough, and mile after mile was covered through wild silences, until a stranger would surely think the guide was playing a losing game. At no time could they ride, and it was with great difficulty that they reached a sort of clearing, where the horses were tied and camp struck for the night. Tearing huge strips of bark from the trees and spreading blankets around them

Trackers have a horror of travelling after dark, being constantly in fear of meeting the Bunyip, a fearful monster with glaring eyes, which they believe to be the spirit of an old aboriginal king who roams around the swampy land at night to catch black men. You can frighten a "tracker" half out of his wits by telling him you will send the Bunyip after him. They also believe that a giant lives on mountain tops, waiting to kill them with a club. Hence they never sleep on top of a mountain or near a swamp, always pitching their brush tents, or mimis, near a dry and level spot. Their only religious belief is that a big god, who has been asleep for ages, will one day awaken and eat up the whole world.—Pearson's Weekly.

AFRICAN FOREST NOT SO BAD.

Frenchman Modifies the Gloomy Pictures of Earlier Travellers.

The travellers who first penetrated the vast equatorial forest of Africa fixed the world's attention with word pictures that are now believed to be partly fantastic. Some of them told how they wandered months without seeing the sun.

They lived at noonday in semi-darkness. The undergrowth almost prevented progress, no fresh breezes could penetrate the area of gloom, and even the animals were silent, like every other phase of nature existing there.

The writers of to-day are taking a different view of this tropical forest. The latest of them is Maurice Delafosse, one of the leading colonial officials of France, who in a book just written contradicts many statements of earlier travellers.

He says that nowhere has he found the African forest darker than any other dense woodland. The vegetation in it is certainly more luxuriant and more crowded together than in a European forest, but it is an exaggeration to say they are covered with impenetrable vegetation.

Wherever the natives live, well worn footpaths lead in all directions. Travelling is hard on some of them, but many of the paths are very useful highways. Delafosse had none of the experience of travellers who assert that their garments have practically been stripped off them by the dense and thorny undergrowth. He lived for months in forests without greater damage to his clothing than in any other parts of Africa, except that when travelling rapidly on a hunting path his sleeves have become unduly worn at the elbows.

As for darkness in the forests, he often took his compass bearings without artificial light when pitching camp at nightfall. The forest traveller has this advantage, that he is always in shadow, and on the hottest days he can pursue his journey the whole afternoon, which would be impossible in the open country.

As for the reputed feeling of discomfort and oppression in the depths of the forest, this is partly true. When there is no stir in the atmosphere it is more difficult to breathe in the forest than in the open, and as there is less chance for evaporation the discomfort of excessive perspiration is manifest. It must be remembered, however, that if under such atmospheric conditions a man breathes more easily in the open land he is at the same time much hotter and so far more uncomfortable. When a breeze stirs anywhere it penetrates the woods also with refreshing effect.

Delafosse records that he has had few such delightful experiences in Africa as on his morning walks in the depths of the forest. He has never found forest travel as uncomfortable as marching over the savannahs where the high grass is above his head. It is then that a man without air, horizon or shade feels as though he would melt.

There are plenty of sounds in the forest to attract attention also, and they help to keep ennui at a distance. Something is going on all the time. In addition to the ceaseless murmur of the streams there are the humming of insects, the song of birds, the chatter of the monkeys, their gymnastic feats from branch to branch the occasional falling

BLACKS OF AUSTRALIA

SOME OF THEIR HABITS, CUSTOMS AND WEAPONS.

Difference Between Interior and Coast Tribes — Methods of Obtaining Food.

It is believed by many persons that the blacks in Australia are dying out. As a matter of fact, says a correspondent of the London Standard, no such thing is happening. The belief, however, is easily explained. As civilization advances, and it is yearly advancing, the blacks recede further and further into the back blocks and unknown country, save a few who have acquired the craving for opium or drink. These latter succumb amid the advancing wave of civilization, and seldom leave any children. Those who have passed inland, if they do not increase, have certainly not decreased. In some few cases whole tribes have died out when civilization has reached them, but these have usually been small tribes.

It is interesting to notice how different are the blacks in regions where food is scarce compared with those who live where bush food, fish, etc., are plentiful. There is a great difference between the inland blacks and the coast blacks. The natives in the interior have sometimes to go for days without a morsel passing their lips, whereas the coast blacks can always procure a meal by the simple method of catching it. Last year the writer crossed the continent of Australia, from Port Darwin in the north to Adelaide in the south, and during the trip saw many different tribes and tribal customs.

THE BEST STAMP OF BLACKS

that I have seen in Australia were on the coast, provided they were far enough from a town not to have discovered the pleasures of grog or opium. Along the coast the food is not only plentiful, but better and more varied than the average working man can afford. The billybongas (water holes) contain quantities of large sweet fish called "fresh water Larrimundee," which the natives are able to spear without difficulty.

On the swamps are geese, ducks (black, brown, whistling Baedikan, and many other kinds), several variety of ibis, pelicans and jabaroes, besides water snakes, which are considered a delicacy. In the mud at the swamp edge yams and edible roots can be obtained by a little digging. During certain season of the year the bush teems with wild turkeys, and at any time a black fellow can catch lizards, iguanas, porcupines and bandycoots. Dugong (a species of porpoise with flesh resembling pork) and turtle are to be had, close to the beach, besides unlimited rock oysters and crabs. Add to all these the wild pigs, which are numerous in places and what more could the black man desire?

The black fellows' method of obtaining geese is easy and effective. Swamps are invariably surrounded by large paper bark or tress, into the topmost branches of which the blacks climb armed with a number of short, heavy throwing sticks. Toward night the geese leave the swamps in a body and after circling round two or three times fly heavily off to the higher and dryer ground for the night. Being clumsy birds, they fly very low, just skimming the tops of the paper bark trees, in some instances, blundering into them. This is the black fellow's opportunity. As the geese pass a few yards overhead the short sticks are hurled among them with deadly precision.

Those birds which fall are quickly secured and despatched by the waiting "lubros," and in a short time enough food is obtained to last for a day or two. The writer has seen ten black fellows secure twenty-three geese in this way in a few moments. Turtles are caught by simply turning them on their backs when they are rendered helpless in which his spearhead is sharpened. There are the round barbed spearhead of the Croker Island black, the stone headed spear of the Liverpool River black, the hardwood spear, with barbs from one to three inches long, made by the Roper River tribe, and so on. In the southern parts of Australia the boomerang is generally used; in the north it is practically unknown. The reason for this is, I believe, that the country is more open in the south, while it is as a rule heavily timbered in the north, especially near the coast. Spearheads are made from old shovels, glass bottles, stones, hoop iron and

ALL SORTS OF HARD WOOD.

They are invariably worked up by the women, some of the weapons taking months to complete. Considering that the natives have no tools, except, perhaps, a very rusty file stolen from some white man's camp, the workmanship is wonderful. A strip is cut out of the shovel about the required width and length with a tomahawk and then rubbed on a rough stone till it is perfect in shape. It is then fixed to the haft with fibre, the whole being smeared over with a glutinous substance, made with gum and ochre, and left till perfectly hard. The hoop iron binding of compressed fodder is greatly coveted by the natives, as it is the exact width required for fish spears, and is easily worked. These fish spears are made with small barbs down each side to prevent the fish slipping off the spear when being drawn out of the water.

Glasshead spears cause dangerous wounds, as many white men can testify, and often cause blood poisoning if not properly attended to. To spear fish the native will wait on a branch hanging low over the waterhole; when a fish comes within reach it seldom gets away. To propel the spear at the game a woomera is used. This consists of a flat piece of wood about four feet long and coming down nearly to a point at one end. A small horn, or sometimes a blunt alligator tooth, is fixed on the point end so that it lies at an angle of about 45 degrees from the woomera. This is fastened with gum and beeswax and must be very strong. In the end of the spear is a small hollow into which the horn fits.

The spear is then held between the first finger and thumb, pressing back so as to keep the hollow close to the horn. The woomera is held between the first and second fingers and thus a tremendous leverage is obtainable. A strong man is able to throw a spear from 60 to 100 yards. At night the blacks often throw short light reed spears, having first thrust one end in the fire till it glows. The effect is much like a shooting star and the distance the reed spears can be thrown is much greater than it is possible to throw one of.

THE HEAVY HEADED WEAPONS.

An aged black fellow once informed me that the reason of this firework display was to keep away the "debil debil" (presumably evil spirits). Inseparable from a black fellow is his tomahawk (chopper), which may be manufactured from many things. The favorite is a horse rasp. The black fellow, or rather his "lubra," cuts off about four inches from the end of the rasp, which operation takes a tremendous time. One end is then sharpened on a smooth stone and the other fastened into a cleft stick, tied above and below with fibre string, and the whole covered generously with beeswax. When finished the blade is only two inches in width. It is surprising what large trees a black fellow will cut down with so poor a weapon in order to get an iguana or a sugar bag (honey made by the wild bee in hollow trees, etc.).

Another weapon affected, although not so generally, is the two handed waddy. That weapon is for use in battle, and therefore is not much in demand, as battles are conducted more with the tongue than the sword. These waddies vary from five to six feet in length and are as a rule oval in shape. Ebony is the wood mostly used and they are as a rule beautifully carved.

until a stranger would surely think the guide was playing a losing game. At the time could they ride, and it was with great difficulty that they reached a sort of clearing, where the horses were tied and camp struck for the night. Tearing huge strips of bark from the trees and wrapping blankets around them, each lay on the concave surface of one or a bed and rested.

THE CLUE OF THE BROKEN TWIG.

At noon the next day a bushman's cabin was reached, and there the tired horses were tethered. The hunters then proceeded on foot. Another night in the forest, and the fourth day found these nrephid hunters making their way through underbrush peculiar to Australia, called "lawyers and barristers," because its thorns and brambles catch one every turn. Once the guide hesitated, turned back, and struck off in another direction down an embankment, the rest following after him.

A wild chase that must have been two white men following the apparently mad actions of a black fellow into places so remote that it would have been impossible to find the way out of them alone. But such is the confidence in that country in the faithfulness and ability of a "tracker." He now crawled for the greater part on his hands and knees, minutely examining twigs and branches for signs of a freshly-broken passage-way for the fugitive. He was about ten feet ahead of the others, when he gave a subdued exclamation of delight.

"I CATCH WHITE FELLER QUICK!"

He said, and pointed to a scrap of clothing hanging to a broken twig. Four hours more, and a river was reached. There in the damp earth of the bank two footprints were plainly seen.

The "tracker" leaped into the river and struck out for the opposite side. Emerging upon the other bank, he ran, dripping, for twenty feet or so, following footprints that had again stopped at the water's edge.

Then the hunter paused. He was plainly puzzled. What had become of the cattle thief? Had he recrossed the river or swam down as far as he could and landed on either bank, then struck into the woods again? After sharply examining the ground, the troubled guide swam back and landed a few yards below his party. By his actions they saw that he had found the tracks again. The criminal had indeed crossed the river, but where had he gone after that?

Trust a "tracker" to solve riddles of that sort! Suddenly he began uncovering leaves and twigs between him and the other two men until he reached them. They were sitting beneath a huge acacia tree.

"White feller no fo! I black feller!" he said, smiling, wet and breathless. Then it was seen that the fugitive had carefully covered up his tracks by walking under the very tree where the party were seated. But apparently the man-hunt was finished; the game had vanished into space!

HIDDEN IN A TREE TRUNK.

The "tracker" dashed into a thicket and hastily secured a strong, pliable vine, used by the natives to scale tree trunks to smooth to climb. This he threw about the tree, and began to ascend it. The others looked on in astonishment. Up went the black until thirty feet in the air. Then those below noticed that the man-trunk of the tree had been broken off years before, forming a crotch for the new branches that had sprung up on either side.

A most astonishing thing happened. Reaching down into the hollow of the half-dead tree trunk, the "tracker" seized something, at the same time shouting to the officer beneath: "Boss, Boss, I catch white feller! He play 'possum'!" Out of the opening appeared a man's head, and a more wretched object could never have been seen. He was fousled, dirty, gaunt, half-starved.

In due course he paid the penalty of his crime. He said that, knowing a "tracker" would be put upon his trail, he had hoped to give him the impression that he had been drowned while swimming the river.

to attract attention also, and they help to keep ennui at a distance. Something is going on all the time. In addition to the ceaseless murmur of the streams there are the humming of insects, the song of birds, the chatter of the monkeys, their gymnastic feats from branch to branch, the occasional falling of dead branches and tree trunks, and at night time the wonderful harmonies and discords of animate and inanimate life that awaken when darkness comes and sleep again at sunrise.

A QUEEN'S DAY.

Wilhelmina of Holland Leads a Very Quiet and Simplified Life.

Her Majesty rises early and takes a cup of tea about seven o'clock each morning. Then come her morning devotions and toilet. After breakfast she opens her letters and replies to them. A walk or a drive fills up the remainder of the morning till lunch at 12.30.

During the afternoon the Queen gives audience to her ministers and other officials. Any reports read by these gentlemen must be brief and to the point. The Royal lady listens to these attentively, and asks many questions.

And evenings over, Queen Wilhelmina goes out for an airing, or perhaps visits a friend. Dinner, which is served at seven o'clock, is a simple meal.

After dinner, unless the Queen gives or is a guest at a ball—a very rare event—the evening is passed quietly in the music-room, card-playing being a pastime of which Queen Wilhelmina does not approve. The Court usually retires at the early hour of half-past ten o'clock.

The Dutch a la re the young monarch, calling her by many pet names. Indeed, when she was seriously ill on one occasion, members of men and women remained outside the palace all night, offering up prayers for the safe recovery of their sovereign lady.

AFRAID OF SAFETY-PINS.

It is not easy to realize the bondage to fear under which barbarous people live on account of their superstitious ignorance. Mrs. Theodore Bent tells in her book, "Southern Arabia," how she tried to make a present of a safety-pin to a native woman, and what a storm of indignation was occasioned by her act. On our arrival at our camping-ground and while we were waiting for our tents to be ready, I was surrounded by women all masked. They seemed highly astonished at a safety-pin which I was taking out, so I gave, or rather offered it, to an old woman near me. She wanted to take the pin, but several men rushed between us and roared at us both, and prevented my giving it to her. I stood there holding it out and she stretching out her hand, and one or two men then asked me for it for her. I put it down on a stone, and she took it away and seemed pleased; but a man soon brought it back to me on the end of a stick, saying they did not know these things and were afraid of them.

LIZARDS THAT LEAP.

The gila monster, the largest lizard of North America, is found in the sandy deserts of New Mexico, and the southern of the United States. It belongs to the only species of venomous lizard known. The Indians and Mexicans dread this little hard-biting reptile, whose bite is, however, seldom fatal to man. It has a short thick tail, which is of assistance to it in jumping. When frightened or angry, its movements are very rapid. Some men who had caught one of these monsters tied it up with a string and commenced teasing it. Presently the creature became furious. The spectators knew nothing about its ability to spring until it suddenly leapt fully two feet off the ground and bit a man's hand. Apart from its venomous quality, the bite itself was a very severe and painful one.

Love at first sight usually causes a man to regret his failure to consult an oculist.

secured and despatched by the wailing "lubros," and in a short time enough food is obtained to last for a day or two. The writer has seen ten black fellows secure twenty-three geese in this way in a few moments. Turtles are caught by simply turning them on their backs, when they are rendered helpless and can be despatched at leisure.

at certain seasons and can be easily found buried in the sand by those who understand where and how to look for them. The plan adopted for capturing the dugong is much the same as the harpoon system, but not so elaborate. The harpoon consists of a hardwood spear with large barbs. The dugong are, however, difficult to secure and are therefore not often troubled by the blacks, who usually prefer their food to be caught and brought to them by the "lubras."

In the same category as the coast blacks should be mentioned the river blacks, such as the tribes on the Goyder, Roper, Liverpool, Macarthur, Alligator, Adelaide, Fitzmaurice, Daly and Victoria rivers. All along the banks of those streams, and within a mile or so of them, are large waterholes which are filled every year by the overflow of the rivers during the wet season. These places abound with fish and waterfowl, and nearby are kangaroos and wallabies, more or less plentiful. Every blackfellow and "lubra" is accompanied wherever he or she goes by several so-called dogs, poor, mangy, skinny animals.

It is wonderful to see a few of these mongrels give chase to and eventually stick up a big old man kangaroo, sometimes standing five feet high. If the chase has been a long one and the dog owners have been left far behind, the dogs will kill the kangaroo themselves, generally losing one or two of their number in the fray. If, however, they manage to get him into a tight corner quickly, they usually keep him there till their masters come up and despatch him.

I have seen three mongrels not any larger or stronger than an Italian greyhound, and very thin, keep a 5 foot 6 inch kangaroo till assistance arrived. Two of them made a sham attack on the brute in front, and as soon as he charged at them another dog nipped him from the rear, forcing him to turn round, and so kept him revolving till the blacks had time to arrive for the kill. It follows from what I have written that while the inland and poorer fed black fellows are undersized and misshapen, the coast and river blacks are found to be large.

STRONG AND SYMMETRICAL.

There are different and often curious customs religiously observed by the several tribes. For instance, one tribe amputates the top joint of the third finger of the right hand of both men and women; another the little finger of the left hand of the men; and another, the first joint of the second toe of the left foot of the women; yet another, the whole of the middle toe of the right foot of both men and women. The blacks themselves are unable to say when these customs originated or why.

Another practice which is general throughout all the tribes of Australia is the ribbing of the skin. When the children are still young long cuts are made across the chest, down the upper arm and leg, and even across the back and ribs. While the wound is quite fresh the cut is opened and a mixture of mud is grafted in, the skin being pulled as far as possible over it. The skin eventually grows completely round the mud filling and forms ridges varying in length and size from an ordinary lead pencil to the thickness of a man's little finger and extending from armpit to armpit. I am informed that while the healing process is going on the pain is exquisite, but the result seems to satisfy all parties concerned.

The black fellow has a variety of weapons manufactured from seemingly impossible things. One who has lived among them can tell to which tribe or region a black man belongs by the way waddy. That weapon is of use in battle, and therefore is not much in demand, as battles are conducted more with the tongue than the sword. These waddies vary from five to six feet in length and are as a rule oval in shape. Ebony is the wood mostly used and they are as a rule beautifully carved. What makes these waddies so precious to connoisseurs is the clever way in which birds and beasts are carved thereon. When one realizes that all the artistic work has been done with pieces of glass bottle it is surprising to see such results. These waddies are in many cases heirlooms, and some of them are centuries old, each generation as they descend to it doing something further in the way of ornamentation. There are other weapons, such as throwing sticks, etc., but those mentioned are

THE ONES MOST USED.

In closing, it may be well to mention the superstitious nature of the black fellow. He will on no account go near the spot where another black has been buried. He has a deep rooted aversion to one particular bird—the wagtail—because, he says, "Him all day talk about a white felle, tellum all about black feller," and no opportunity is lost of killing these little birds.

Many tribes "bury" their dead by sticking them up into the fork of a tree, and there leaving them till the flesh has either dropped or been taken, leaving the bones clean. These bones are then taken down, the larger ones buried and the smaller handed around as keepsakes to those nearly related to the deceased. Should one black fellow wish the death of a rival or enemy he points the bone at him. This means that he takes one of his late relation's bones from his dilly bag and points it, in the presence of witnesses, at the man he wishes to get rid of, all the time pouring forth threats and curses.

Strange as it may seem, the one pointed at will often languish, and eventually die, perhaps in a month, perhaps in a year, but no sooner is the bone pointed than he makes up his mind to die, and there is no saving him.

As a whole, the black fellow is greedy, untrustworthy, treacherous and in some places not free from cannibalism; but he is, nevertheless, a very interesting study.

PET NAMES.

Terms of Endearment Used by One Nation are Unsuitable to Other Peoples.

The terms employed by the people of one nation as the choicest phrases in their vocabulary of endearment are often employed for quite the opposite purposes by other peoples. One of the most familiar and most coveted phrases of endearment among the French, for instance, is "My little pig" and "My little puppy dog" is also much appreciated. When a French husband calls his wife "a cat," she does not fly into a passion of resentment, as an English-speaking wife might do under the same circumstances, but takes it as a gentle compliment. On the other hand, if he were to call her "a duck," as the British husband might his wife, she would be very much offended.

Some time ago, in Germany, letters written by the late Count von Moltke to his betrothed were published. In these the great soldier frequently called the lady "My little kernel of coffee." This strikes one as a very queer pet name, and has suggested to a cynical authority that, in view of the writer's profession, "My little grain of powder," or "My little lump of lead," would have been more appropriate.

A person's individual likings and occupation frequently supply him with terms of endearment. A farmer sometimes calls his little girl his "colt," and a well-known fisherman, to whom the creatures of the brook were as the apple of his eye, used to begin his letters to his wife, when he was on his fishing expeditions, with the words, "My dear little speckled trout!"

Work may be good for men, but few men are good for work.

OLD CLOTHES OF ROYALTY

COSTUMES WORN BUT ONCE AND THEN PUT AWAY FOR GOOD.

King Edward Wears a Pair of Gloves More Than Once—Kaiser's Wardrobe is Biggest.

An enterprising English journalist wrote an interesting if not instructive article recently on King Edward's clothes and what became of them after they had finished service. In the article the statement was made that the King never wore a pair of gloves more than once, writes a London correspondent.

Out of this arose a discussion as to the necessity of considering gloves damaged by one day's service, &c., which went on until Lord Knollys, who is the King's inseparable companion, friend and servitor, described in a moment of candor the story as ridiculous. Yet it was admitted that there are some things that the King uses only once, such as white evening ties, certain neckties and white evening gloves, which would be true also of many other masculine leaders of fashion.

The list of King Edward's quickly discarded garments would include also certain state robes which have appeared in public only once, such as those of the coronation and the costume of the Grand Master of the Knights of Malta. This last was worn at the Devonshire House ball when he was Prince of Wales at the time of the Diamond Jubilee of Queen Victoria.

Then, of course there are certain regiment uniforms which have been worn just once in honor of some occasion. All these are put away in presses and are regularly overhauled and kept in good condition. Perhaps some day they will find their way to a museum to be shown as relics of

EDWARD THE PEACEMAKER.

In his ordinary dress the King is very particular as to cut and quality, but he wears his various suits as many times as any rich man of the world would. Then they share the fate of all discarded garments and become the property of some one else for various fates.

In regard to Queen Alexandra's wardrobe, she too has certain garments which are of historic interest and are put away to be looked at sometimes but never used again. Among these are her wedding gown and long tan gloves, the robes of the coronation day and the military uniform of her Danish regiment. There are university gowns and hoods which have not been worn since the degrees they represent were conferred upon her.

The beautiful dresses which the Queen wears at the evening courts are seen but once. Sometimes a part of a gown is used again in another fashion. This applies particularly to the priceless collection of old lace of which she is so proud, and which is used over and over again in trimming her gowns.

If Queen Alexandra does not wish to use any of the trimmings of a dress again the garment is taken to pieces and the materials distributed. There is an inviolable rule in the palace that the recipient of any royal finery is never in any circumstance to wear a gown in the form in which it was worn by the Queen.

THE PRINCESS OF WALES

has a large and varied collection of uniforms, university gowns and Oriental robes of great value and beauty. During her visits to the British colonies and to India she received many honorary degrees. These garments are all guarded for posterity after the royal fashion.

In her ordinary wearing apparel the Princess does not hesitate to be seen in the same gown many times, especially if it happens particularly to suit her somewhat severe style of good looks. After she has finished with them they are given to the various ladies of her household to dispose of.

THE COCKNEY DIALECT

CRUSADE AGAINST IT BY THE PURE SPEECH LEAGUE.

London County Council's Attempt to Teach Children to Speak Correctly.

Much interest has been aroused by the work of the Pure Speech League of Hornsey, London, England, which has begun a campaign to reform the Cockney dialect. The members of the league, however, are not the first champions in the field. For a number of years the education department of the London County Council have been making earnest attempts to teach young Londoners to speak correctly, and Dr. Kimmins, the chief inspector, says that an improvement is already manifest; "Compared with a few years ago," he says, "the reading of the children, even in the lower classes, is remarkable for its purity of enunciation. Aspirates are properly sounded, and the vowels are distinctly more correct than they were. The children may use a different speech when they get outside school, and they may revert to Cockneyisms when their school days are over. I cannot say. But I am very sanguine about the ultimate results of the movements."

A number of members of the Pure Speech League have made a hobby of collecting "Cockneyisms."

THE GEM OF THE COLLECTION

so far was picked up at Hornsey by Canon Horsley. The clergyman asked one of his parishioners what the baby's name was, and received the answer: "Byby's nyme's Jyne, plyne Jyne." It is vainly imagined that the Cockneyisms are confined to the uneducated classes. When pointing this out, the Londoner, who regards his own speech as perfect, is as likely as not to say "sawr" for "saw."

A curious document is preserved at the Law Courts. Some of the briefless juniors amuse themselves by taking phonetic records of the utterances of a successful practitioner. The gem of the collection is this: "Dijer say yo sawr 'im in the line?" The witness, being a Londoner himself, correctly interpreted the question as, "Did you say you saw him in the lane?"

Some distinguished persons are so fond of the Cockney dialect that they never use any other. An alderman at a City dinner said to the Lord Chancellor: "Do you think Ighgate pretty?" The Chancellor confessed that he had not noticed any difference in the alderman's appearance. "I'm not talking about myself," said the bewildered alderman. "I said Ighgate."

Dr. Skeat, professor of Anglo-Saxon at Cambridge University, whose life work has been the study of words—their sound, spelling, meaning and history, and who is one of the foremost philologists in the world, says,

COCKNEYISMS CHANGE RAPIDLY.

"The Cockneyisms of to-day," he says, "are quite different from those recorded by Dickens. I was born in London, and lived there for ten years. Not until thirty or forty years ago did I ever hear the substitution of 'f' for 'a.' I can well remember the shock of surprise with which I first heard a porter shout 'Myden Lyne!' when we got to the station of Maiden Lane."

"London has an enormous influence on the accepted pronunciation of English, and that influence will prevail more and more. It is quite possible that in course of time the standard of educated English speech will be affected by it."

"That is a matter of importance, for the spoken word, and that alone, is the word itself. The written form is only its picture or representation to the eye, and frequently represents it imperfectly. We have five vowels in the English alphabet. To represent correctly the vowel sounds used in England, we should require a hundred letters."

MARCONI MASTERS FOG

THE LATEST APPLICATION OF THE WIRELESS PRINCIPLE.

His Invention Will be of Very Great Benefit in St. Lawrence River Navigation.

That wireless telegraphy has not yet exhausted its store of wonders and surprises was proved to a London Daily Chronicle representative in an interesting talk with Mr. Marconi at his London office. One approaches this man, who while yet in his youth revolutionized telegraphy, in the expectation of meeting a typical and rather uncanny wizard, who has but to wave his hands to work all manner of wonders by an unseen force. But there is nothing uncanny, and nothing to suggest study and midnight oil, about the tall, athletic, well-groomed young man, who greets you in breezy fashion, and in such perfect English that his Italian name is forgotten and you remember only that

HIS MOTHER WAS IRISH.

"Oh, yes," he said, "I'll tell you what I'm trying to do and what are my hopes; but please don't make me seem boastful, and don't let us have too much of the I—I—I."

"We can send twenty-four words a minute across the Atlantic, or forty-eight when we can use the duplex system. But at present we can only send messages one way at a time. If an operator tried to send a message across while he was receiving one there would be great confusion, one man using against another"—and Mr. Marconi waved his hand to suggest a grand collision of language in mid-Atlantic.

"But lately I have been experimenting with apparatus which will enable us to send a message in both directions at once. The experiments have been quite successful over a distance of three or four miles at Poole, in Dorsetshire, and I anticipate equal success before long across the Atlantic. That is one of my latest experiments. Another is to enable a ship approaching the shore or another ship in a fog to determine exactly the position of the wireless station on shore or the course of the other ship. You can see, of course, if he is able to know not only that another ship is approaching, but the exact angle the course of that ship makes with his own.

HOW IT WILL HELP A NAVIGATOR

"It is perhaps a little difficult to explain the idea to the general reader, but here it is roughly"—and Mr. Marconi sketched rapidly on his blotting pad while he spoke. "We get, you see, a screen with a small hole in the centre. This is turned about in the direction from which the other ship or the shore station is known to be telegraphing, until the ringing of a bell, caused by the waves entering the hole in the screen, shows that the exact direction from which the wave is coming has been ascertained."

"I shall be carrying out experiments on these lines in the Mersey in a few weeks. The idea is being specially welcomed by shipping authorities on the St. Lawrence River, where fog so often hinders navigation."

The Empress of Germany has the same rule regarding gowns worn on state occasions as Queen Alexandra. These are never seen again in the same form. Dresses chosen for less important events, a reception, a dinner, an embassy crush or the theatre, may be worn two or three times. When the gowns are done with they are ripped up by some of the fifteen court seamstresses and the material given away. The pretty young Princess Victoria Luise still dresses like a school girl and her simple frocks are worn again and again.

There is probably no monarch who has more clothes than the German Emperor. He has hundreds of different uniforms of which perhaps a dozen may have been worn more than once. He has a tremendous variety of workman's habiliments, such as those worn by coal miners or workers in tunnels, which he has put on at some time to prove his comradeship with the horny handed sons of toil in the fatherland. Then he has dozens of costumes which he has worn to fancy dress balls. The one that he values most among these is the costume that he wore at a ball when he appeared as his famous ancestor Frederick the Great.

THE EMPEROR OF RUSSIA.

As the chief of the imperial army is able at a moment's notice to take his place at the head of any Russian regiment in the proper uniform. Some of the troops in the remotest parts of his vast dominion are so seldom seen in the capital that the corresponding uniform has been brought out only once.

The Empress of Russia, who is honorary colonel of several regiments, has had tunics with the proper badges made for her use. In her ordinary dress she is very simple and only consents to don magnificence on state occasions.

Queen Amalia of Portugal has long been known as one of the best dressed Queens in Europe. She seldom is seen in any gown more than once, and is very generous in her disposal of old clothes among the less affluent ladies of her court.

The Queen of Italy is so plainly dressed that her great extravagance in evening shoes is amusing. She never wears a pair more than once. In this she is like the ex-Empress Eugenie, except that Eugenie gave all her discarded slippers and shoes to the girls' orphanage in Paris, while the Queen of Italy disposes of hers less charitably.

The young King of Spain has developed a great interest in sartorial art since his visits to England and both he and the Queen seldom wear their garments many times. The Spanish court is rapidly following their example, so that beautiful gowns and many of them, are the order of the day just now in Spain.

After all, poor old Queen Elizabeth, who created a sensation with her one hundred and twenty gowns and thirty wigs in the modest times in which she lived, would find herself behind her sister royalties of to-day, and her one hundred and twenty gowns would not go far toward making her considered a well dressed queen.

CURE FOR HEADACHE.

"The best cure I know of for a headache is to wash your face," said a bright looking man. "Yes, I believe to suddenly cleanse your face with cold water will open up the pores and probably start the blood in circulation, and I know it will relieve you of a headache in a jiffy. I have tried it myself a great many times and have always been successful. There is something in the nature of a stimulant in the cold water treatment that braces me right up. My head when it aches gets hot and throbs, and the water makes it cool and fresh. I have a theory, too, that people don't wash their faces nearly enough anyhow."

Time may be a wound healer, but it's no good as a wrinkle eradicator.

How a Paris Gambler Won and Lost a Fortune.

M. Lambert, a gentleman of independent means living in the Rue Quincampoix, in Paris, France, has had an unpleasant adventure in the little town of Enghien, in the suburbs, in which there are a casino and a club where gambling is carried on.

The other evening M. Lambert went down to Enghien, and after dinner spent a pleasant half hour at the "little horses" table, where he won about $100. Pleased with his winnings, he went to the door of the club, which is in a room situated on the first floor of the same building, and asked for admission. The man at the door told him that, although he was not a member, he could probably be admitted in a very short time.

M. Lambert said that he was willing to pay any necessary entrance fee, and after formalities—which lasted exactly ten minutes—he became a member of the club. There, instead of "little horses," baccarat was being played.

M. Lambert was lucky. He at first lost half the money that he had won downstairs at the "little horses" table, but then he began to win and won throughout the evening, finishing by taking the bank, and rising a winner of a little over $35,000.

He went off with this money in his pocket, left the club and casino building, and walked down the road towards the railway station. Two men followed him. M. Lambert remembered to have seen them in the room, but paid no particular attention to them.

Suddenly the men rushed forward—one on either side of him—tripped him up, and methodically went through his pockets. They took his money, his watch and chain, his scarf pin, and the rings on his fingers. Then they undressed him, and, with the deliberation which had characterized all their movements, threw him into the lake nearby.

It is not a particularly well-smelling lake, but fortunately it is not very deep and M. Lambert, who can swim a little, made his way to shore.

BEWARE THE CHINAMAN.

Not a Safe Man for Occidental Girls to Wed.

A disillusioned Parisienne who married a Chinaman is now suing before the Paris courts for a divorce.

The respondent is a certain Hsingling, whose father some years ago was Chinese Minister in Paris. The son, who was an attaché at the Legation, was received in good society. He made the acquaintance of the lady who is now petitioning for a divorce and sought her hand in marriage. Her family objected, but ultimately their scruples were overcome, and the pair were married in the autumn of 1902.

While in Europe Hsingling was a model husband, but a year or so after the marriage he was recalled to Peking, his wife accompanying him. Mme Hsingling found life there not at all to her liking. Her husband, immediately he set foot in China, became metamorphosed. He shed his European manners, so to speak, and, according to his wife's account, from a courtly dignified gentleman he became a brutal Oriental. According to her statements, she suffered unspeakable indignities. She was locked up in a room and kept prisoner. Ultimately after some months of confinement, she contrived to communicate with the French Legation, and after a period of lengthy negotiations her release was obtained.

As it was feared an attempt would be made to kidnap her, she left Peking under an escort provided by the Legation, and this guard saw her safely on board a steamer at Shanghai. There is a baby in the case, and the wife is seeking the custody of the child.

Judgment was reserved.

A COMMON CLAIM.

Every chronic office-holder claims that he could make more money if he had the heart to quit serving the public and go into business for himself.

the spoken word, and that alone, is the word itself. The written form is only its picture or representation to the eye, and "frequently represents it imperfectly. We have five vowels in the English alphabet. To represent correctly the vowel sounds used in England, we should require a hundred. Dr. Wright, in his dialect dictionary, gives sixteen different pronunciations of the word "down," prevalent in various parts of England. The consonants are the same in every case; the difference is in the vowel sounds, and those have to be expressed by special signs with an arbitrary value."

THE REBIRTH OF BRUGES.

Restoration of Trade to a Forgotten Capital.

After more than four centuries of stagnation, Bruges, once the commercial capital of Europe, is to regain some of its ancient prosperity. The sea has been restored to it. A canal has been cut from the city to the sea, a new port constructed, and a way made by which the quaint old city of the lace-makers may handle some of the current of trade which passes between the ocean and the hinterland.

In the middle of the fifteenth century Bruges was the busiest and richest city, if not the largest, in Europe. It was situated on a canal which had been so built as to form a branch of the Zwyn estuary, was a principal market of the Hanseatic League, and had at its wharves shipping from all the world. When Paris numbered one hundred and twenty thousand people, Bruges had a fourth more. Its factories were never idle, its merchants became princes, its many canals were alive with boats bound for inland places.

But in the course of time it was found that the arm of the sea was filling with drifting sands. Efforts were made to stay the process, but without success. Year by year the waters shoaled, and by the middle of the sixteenth century Bruges was but an inland town, the empty shell of former greatness.

In the lapsing centuries many efforts have been made to restore the city's harbor. A canal to Ostend gave some relief, but was soon rendered obsolete by the increase in the size of vessels. In 1810 Napoleon attempted to solve the problem, but failed again.

Meanwhile the population fell away to forty thousand. Houses and stores stood idle. Only the lace factories remained busy. They still employed five thousand of the Bruges women, and the ancient city hall, the markets and churches, built in the days of prosperity, remained the finest examples in northern Europe of the architecture of the fifteenth century.

At last, thirty years ago, a certain Flemish nobleman proposed a deep canal to the sea direct. After a dozen years of deliberation the government agreed, and in 1896 the state, province and city together begun work.

A canal twenty-six feet deep has been dredged through the sand, about eight miles in a straight line to the North Sea. There immense concrete jetties make a new "fore port" for Bruges, where passengers and express freight can be transferred to rail. Heavy goods will pass through a lock to the canal, and so to a great new basin at the city itself, where all the canals have access to wharves and quays. A city of Zebrugge, or Sea-Bruges, has been established at the mouth of the canal. Bruges itself has already felt the impetus, and it is rapidly growing again, the population in 1900 being more than fifty thousand. Its paupers, of which it has the largest proportion of any European city, are diminishing, and prosperity seems at hand.

Nothing more picturesque has been attempted by the engineers in recent years than this restoration of trade to a forgotten capital, this re-introduction of the sea through the treacherous dunes to the ancient City of Bridges.

It's useless to cry over spilt milk; in a few hours it would have soured, anyway.

the elbow of the Japanese householder all the time, and because he lives in a matchwood dwelling Sakure-san has to take a curious precaution against the sudden loss of all his household goods. This precaution is the godown.

The stranger in Tokio or Yokohama who sees from his rickshaw a strange iron plated building with doors like turret shutters and painted roof heavily interlarded with tiles is led to believe that here perhaps is some feudal fort of the old time, ready to house fighting men against the attacks of a street mob. But when the tourist finds one of these black shelled buildings on every other block he learns from the country dweller that these things are godowns or storehouses for household goods.

When a fire gets well started in the crowded blocks of dolls' houses in a Japanese city it is rarely stopped until from ten to fifty houses have been consumed and a black scar has been drawn across the whole face of the district. Because the houses are so flimsy and crowded so closely together that the Japanese firemen even at their best can do little with a well developed blaze certain astute citizens erect these iron sheathed and shuttered two storied storehouses, where in the householders of the neighborhood and the storekeepers of the district can store away their valuables.

The godowns are so heavily sheathed with iron plate and so weighted with mud tiles that they rarely burn. All day long their windows are kept almost hermetically sealed by heavy swinging shutters that look like the doors of a safe. When a fire comes to a certain district the first thing is to close the doors of the godown and put it in shape to weather the flames.

To these public fireproof safes the householders bring their best furniture, their porcelain and their delicate prints. The wives keep locked up there their best kimonos and their odds and ends of jewelry. Merchants have their excess stock stowed away within them.

Whenever there is a fete in any Japanese home or preparations are being made for the entertainment of some special guests the servants are sent to the nearby godown to bring home all the valuables. Pictures are again hung on the wall, the heavy bronze vase is restored for the day to its special tabouret, and the wardrobe of Madame is replenished.

Then with the passing of the special occasion passes also the household grandeur. All the fleeting prettiness of prin and flowered kimono is swallowed up in the black maw of the godown.

THE PHILOSOPHER.

If a man's conversation bores the majority of his auditors he is probably talking intellectually.

The millennium will have come when men use good intentions for other than paying purposes.

One consolation to the woman who marries a man for his title is that she gets it.

To refer to a man as candid is only a polite way of announcing that he is disagreeable as a companion.

It worries a woman because she can never be sure whether a bachelor is really happy or just pretending to be.

One nice thing about being a minister is that you get paid for all advice you pass out.

Some men seem unable to recognize hypocrisy until just after it has passed by them.

People are going to be badly disappointed when they learn they are no to pass upon who is to get into heaven.

The angels probably do not go around inquiring of each other what dress maker turned out the robes.

BLISS.

"Iysander (sweetly), do you know what day this is?"

"Sure! Our anniversary, Margaret dear (pretending to have remembered it all the time)."

"No such thing (frigidly). It's the day you promised to nail the leg of that old kitchen table!"

THE BEST FLOUR. DAFOE'S NONESUCH DAFOE'S MANITOBA PATENT

By numerous tests by the best Bakers the above mentioned grades have been proven to be the best Flours in the market. When buying Flour ask for Dafoe's, and patronize your home mill, thereby producing Bran and Shorts that you can purchase cheaper than the product of the Western mills, which has to be transported thousands of miles at great expense, and usually, when it reaches you, of inferior quality.

The grocer complains if the farmer or the mechanic sends to Toronto or to outside points for an article he can get at the home store just as good, but he does not hesitate to buy Flour from mills hundreds of miles away, and sell you an inferior Flour for more money than you can purchase the home product for, every bag of which is guaranteed.

CHOICE CORN MEAL and BUCK-WHEAT FLOUR always on hand.

ment of losses. The Board of Directors confidently expect by the close of the year to have at least 1200 members with an Insurance of $2,000,000 and greatly add to their already handsome cash surplus. Farmers desiring to insure will find the officials, M. C.
Bogart, Secretary, and F. C. Bogart,
Treasurer, at the Company's office ever ready to do business, and a note to them or the efficient and courteous agents, Messrs D. L. Greene and Manly Jones, will receive their prompt and immediate attention.

Broke Her Leg.
A very sad accident happened to
Mrs. Thomas Symington, near Louisville, Kentucky, Thursday last. She,
with Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Gibbard, were attending the International Sunday School convention, being held at Louisville, last week. When their duties at the convention were over they were taking in some of the sights and among one of the last places visited was the Mammoth cave in Kentucky, visited by nearly every sightseer who goes to that vicinity. They were just entering the cave when Mrs. Symington slipped on a stone and broke her leg just above the ankle. Although they were some nine miles from a doctor, all haste was made and the injured limb set, and as Mrs. Symington expressed the wish that she should be taken home, the return journey was made. At noon, Friday Mrs. Symington arrived home, and considering the suffering from the pain of the broken limb, she stood the journey fairly well.
She was met at the station by a number of gentlemen composing her Sunday school class and carried home.

Burned to Death.

Two little children, of Mr. and Mrs. E. Bauder at the big Dipper Mine near Myers' Cave, were burned to death on Tuesday last. The little ones were in the house with their mother when a lightning storm broke. Their father was at work at the mine. When the storm abated, Mrs. Bauder had gone out. Three minutes later, the house was struck by lightning, and instantly was enveloped in flames. When Mrs. Bauder saw the awful sight, she rushed back and tried to save her little ones. Her husband had meantime gone to the big boarding house on an errand and also saw his home in flames. With some women of the boarding house, about 100 feet away, he, too, hurried to the scene of the catastrophe. There were no other men within reach at the time, and nothing could have been done if they had been there, as the little house was a mass of flames. Mrs. Bauder would have sacrificed her own life to save her children, and was quite badly burned with attempts to get into the burning house. She was pulled back by the mistress of the boarding house. It was a sad sight, writes the correspondent, to see Mr. Hicks, the foreman of the mines, gathering the charred remains of the two little children from among the debris, after the fire. The remains were placed in a sack, and later in a coffin. On Thursday they were taken over the lake in the mine company's steam launch to Myers' Cave, where the funeral party was met by a large number of people. The remains were interred in the English cemetery at Plevna, beside those of Mr. Bauder's other child, which was found dead in bed just eight weeks ago. Mr. and Mrs. Bauder lost everything they had by the fire, and are also left without their most precious possessions—their two little children.

Greedy.

Two Englishmen on a holiday in France were dining together at a Paris restaurant. Mr. Smith would order and ask for everything he wanted in doubtful French, while Mr. Cross would offer explanations that were in the nature of criticisms. At last Mr. Smith's temper rose to explosive point. "Will you," he said—in English this time—"be so good as not to interfere with me in the use of my French?"

"Very well," retorted Mr. Cross. "I simply wanted to point out that you were asking for a staircase when all you wanted was a spoon!"—London Mail.

Suffering Humanity.

"Mrs. Sourmug, who thought she had a mission to look after suffering humanity, is married, isn't she?"

"Yep."

"I was surprised to learn that she had given up her mission in life."

"She hasn't. Her husband is going to be suffering humanity hereafter."

The Pursuit of Pleasure.

We smile at the ignorance of the savage who cuts down the tree in order to reach its fruits. But the fact is that a blunder of this description is made by every person who is overzealous and impatient in the pursuit of pleasure.
